Today's War News Given in Summary.

The Austro-Germans apparently have begun successfully a new effort to drive the Russians out of the small part of eastern Galicia remaining to them. Berlin today reports that attacks on the lines along the Zlota-Lipa river resulted in the Russian lines being pierced north and south of Brzezany. The Russians are retreating and being pursued.

In the eastward drive of Gen. von Eichhorn's troops, the town of Narew about twenty miles east of the Bialystok-Bielsk line, has been occupied. German cavalry is active on the Russian left flank, southeast of Brest-Litovsk, where a success of this branch of the army in the pursuit of the Russians is reported.

In the Baltic provinces successes for the Germans in battles north of Bausk and Schoenburg, with the capture of more than 2,000 prisoners and some artillery, are claimed.

An attempted German air raid on Paris was frustrated by a French air flotilla, dispatches from Paris state. One machine of the four in the German air raiding force was brought down by bullets and fell flaming into a forest. Both aviators in it were burned to death. The other three machines escaped, after one had dropped five bombs on Montmorency fifteen miles from Paris.

Only bomb fighting and artillery engagements on the front in France are reported by Paris. Another railroad station behind the German lines has been bombarded.

There has been little if any change in the situation on the Gallipoli peninsula in the Dardanelles, so far as the latest Turkish official report indicates.

Paris, Aug. 28.—German aeroplanes attempted to make a raid on Paris this morning. They were attacked by a French air flotilla and one of the German machines was shot to pieces in midair.

The German machines crossed the French lines flying at a great height and driving toward the city of Paris. When over a point to the north of the capital they sighted a French air flotilla, which was waiting for them, and three of the German aeroplanes wheeled about and headed for the German lines.

MARIETTA ROUNDS UP UNDESIRABLES

Marietta, Ga., Aug. 28.—Eight men who did not give satisfactory explanations of their presence here were rounded up late last night, placed in a box car on a freight train and sent away. The car was guarded safely until the train left the town limits. Since Leo M. Frank was lynched near here August 17, several persons, whose business in the town was not known, have been invited to leave. Five men were ordered away yesterday and today could not be found.

These events and the continued receipt of letters threatening various acts of vengeance for Frank's lynching caused police officials here to increase the number of officers by fifteen today. Letters are being received from all parts of the country by town and Cobb county officials and by persons who have given statements on the Frank case to newspapers outside the state.

LAST MINUTE NEWS

FORMER POLICE CHIEF UNDER ARREST ESCAPES.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 28.—Joke Jakonis, former chief of police, at Westville, arrested at Omaha, Neb., on a charge of embezzlement and who was being brought to this city by two deputy sheriffs, escaped from a Wabash train today at Taylorville. He jumped through a window as the train was going at the rate of thirty miles an hour. Bloodhounds have been sent to the scene in an effort to retake him.

BRINGS CANADA'S TOTAL UP TO 100,000 TROOPS.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 28.—Twelve Canadian battalions of infantry are to be placed in England for final training, according to announcement made today by the military authorities. The troops will be regarded as reinforcements to be called for service in France and Flanders as required.

This draft will bring the number of men Canada has sent to England up to 100,000.

Rudisill Boulevard Surely Needs Some Kind of Improvement

Rudisill boulevard, extending across the entire south side of the city, last been the source of much discussion in municipal circles, with the final discovery several days ago that the property along the thoroughfare, from Calhoun street to Broadway, is assessed at about ten per cent. of its value. When the park board sought to take steps to pave the boulevard it was discovered that the appraised valuation of the abutting property would not permit the improvement. Rudisill boulevard is the worst road in the city limits. The center picture shows the eight and ten inch mud holes that make it up, and the top and bottom pictures the roadway's relation to the sidewalk. The road is marked by arrows and the walks by crosses. There is a drop of three feet and a slight twist of a wheel would throw an automobile over the road to the sidewalk. But there is little danger of that occuring—no automobiles are seen on the boulevard; they can't get through. The board of park commissioners is working hard to find a way to pave the street and has not yet given up hope.

BIG CELEBRATION AT HARMAR SCHOOL

Elaborate Plans Afoot to Dedicate Splendid Building.

By the initiative and under the leadership of Councilman A. H. Keller, of the Eighth ward, and Councilman-at-Large Jacob Hartman, who resides in that ward, plans are under way for an elaborate and formal dedication of the new Harmar school building at Washington, Harmar and Jefferson streets. The building will be completed in time for the opening of the public schools, Tuesday, September 7, and it is purposed that some evening of that week shall be chosen for the celebration.

Councilmen Keller and Hartman have the co-opeeration of the city school board and the municipal administration has been asked to take part in the ceremony. The Harmar school is the newest and finest of the grade schools in Fort Wayne and the people of the Eighth ward, in which it is situated, are to a high degree proud of it. They want the opening of the building to public service signalized by an event commensurate with its beauty and importance.

Details of the program have not yet been worked out. It is planned, however, to have a program of speeches and music and to illuminate the building and throw it open for public inspection. The park board has agreed to transfer to the school building for this occasion one of the postponed park concerts by the Elks' band and Prof. William Miles, superintendent of musical instruction in the public schools, will be asked to drill the pupils of the Harmar school in choral work that they may sing one or two of the national hymns at the dedication.

The system of ornamental lights placed on the circular curb that surrounds the school grounds on three sides will have been completed by the time of the celebration and the lights will be turned on for that night.

The plans under contemplation will probably bring together one of the greatest crowds that has ever atended a similar function in the state. Councilmen Keller and Hartman and the school authorities expect to be able to announce a definite program next week.

POWDER MAN BARES PLOT

SAYS ONE LOOKED LIKE REV. KAYSER

Gary, Ind., Aug. 28.—Joseph Kramer, a powder-maker, interrogated by the police today in connection with their investigation of the murder of the German pastor, Rev. Edmund Kayser, whose body was found near the parsonage in Tolleston last Tuesday night, said two men, one of whom "looked like Kayser," recently approached him with a proposition to blow up the Aetna powder works, where he is employed.

He said he reached an agreement with the two under which he was to get $1,500 for destroying the Aetna plant, bnt that later he decided to tell the police instead.

Other Developments.

The arrest of Thomas Modjesch, an inspector at the Gary steel mills, and a statement by State's Attorney Clyde Hunter that Kayser was slain by his own revolver as a result of a quarrel over business matters with persons who called upon him the night of his murder, furnished other developments in the case.

Statements made to Chief or Police Heintz by Attorney Paul J. Tomanoczy, with offices in Chicago and Gary, and who was reported to have talked with Kayser an hour before his body was found by a passerby, resulted in the arrest of Modjesch, who was held pending an examination. The nature of the information leading up to the arrest of Modjesch was guarded by Chief Heintz, who said that he merely wished to question the former.

E. W. Andre, president of the German alliance, of Hammond, Ind., asserted that as a result of his investigation he had come to the conclusion that Kayser was murdered by a sympathizer of the allies, because of the pastor's alleged denunciation of England, Russia and France. Andre stated that Kayser had repeatedly said that he feared his life was in danger as a result of his utterances.

FORTY APPLICANTS TAKE EXAMINATION

Forty applicants for teachers' licenses took the examination held Saturday in one of the vacant court rooms on the third floor of the court house. It was the last chance teachers had of getting a license before the opening of school. Another examination will be held in October, at which time all teachers residing outside of the state who did not have an opportunity of taking an examination before will be privileged to take this one.

Weitzmann, a widow woman, living at 1329 Taylor street, was struck by an incoming interurban car and thrown to the pavement with terrific force. He was not seriously injured, however.

Weitzmann attempted to pass the car and did not turn far enough out to avoid being struck. The bicycle was badly damaged. The car was in charge of Motorman J. Armstrong and Conductor Shidler.

INTERNED GERMANS RAID FARMER CAREY'S MELONS.

Norfolk, Va., Aug 82.—Farmer Carey, of the Deep Creek section, complained today to the commander o fthe interned German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich that three separate invasions of his watermelon patch by men of the Eitel Friedrich crew had caused him $200 damages. The German commander agreed to having the damage estimated by an umpire and promised payment. The farmer said his loss was so great because the Eitel's sailors carved up many green melons to learn if they were ripe.

EVANGELIST "BILLY" SUNDAY.

That Charles R. Lane will have opposition for the republican congressional nomination is the word that has drifted in from Columbia City. Within a few days it is expected that W. W. Williamson will announce his candidacy.

Some days ago, so the story goes, a delegation of Lagrange county republicans made a visit to Columbia City soliciting the support for a favorite son whom they intended to bring out. The Lagrange contingent was informed that Columbia City would have a candidate in the person of W. W. Williamson, editor of the Columbia City Commercial-Mail. Report has it that this met with the favor of the Lagrange men and they thereupon decided to drop their man and support the Columbia City editor.

Mr. Lane has received many letters from all parts of the Twelfth district promising him support. Republican leaders feel confident of success this year and for this reason friends of Mr. Lane are urging that he be nominated without opposition in view of the sacrifices he has made on previous occasions when there was not the least chance in the world for a republican to win.

But the Columbia City Post, a democratic organ, does not take this view and has taken the liberty to give Mr. Lane the following bit of advice: "To be perfectly candid with Charles, the Post will say that it would be for his own good if the voters in his party would knock the spots off him at the primary, for it will avail him nothing to spend his good money and orate over the district for three months or more next year." His friends, however, take a different view. They feel confident that in the event of his nomination he will be elected.

BILLY SUNDAY COMES TO BOWSER'S MONDAY

Evangelist to Address the Workmen—Loren Jones Will Sing.

Evangelist "Billy" Sunday is coming to Fort Wayne next Monday to address the employes of the Bowser works, and President S. F. Bowser today announced that the public was very welcome to join the throng and hear the noted gospel campaigner.

The meeting will begin at 1 o'clock, and the west doors of the plant on Bowser avenue will be thrown open to accommodate the public. With Mr. Sunday will be Mr. and Mrs. Loren Jones, singer and pianist with Dr. Lyon's evangelistic party in Fort Wayne last winter. It is expected that a large audience in addition to the army of Bowser employes will embrace this opportunity to hear both the evangelist and the singer.

WILL NOT ACCEPT OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Orders were issued Friday by Trustee Herny P. Scherer at all hospitals prohibiting them from accepting patients sent here from a distance to be cared for at Wayne township's expense. Nearby towns impose on Fort Wayne, according to Trustee Scherer. "We have enough of our own to care for without being burdened with those from outside," Trustee Scherer declared. The trustee's order was the result of his discovery of a patient being sent here from Montpelier, Ohio. He was accepted at the hospital and had been there two or three days before the trustee was aware of his presence.

Appeal Militia Case from Warsaw Decision

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Whether a military court or the civil courts have jurisdiction over the Indiana National Guard was today before the state supreme court for decision, an appeal from the ruling of Acting Judge A. G. Wood, of the circuit court, which gave the power to the civil courts having been taken here late last night.

The case will be made a test because of its importance in maintaining the discipline of the militia.

George Mowery, of Company H. of the Indiana National Guard, of this city, was sentenced to eight days in jail for wilful disobedience in refusing to attend the camp of instructions at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Judge Wood last night granted a writ of habeas corpus upsetting the ruling of the military court and placing the civil court over the national guard court. He then granted the appeal to the state supreme court.

ARABIC CASE COMES FIRST

U. S. OFFICIALS MUCH ENCOURAGED

But Withhold Comment Until Next German Note is Received.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Discussion of the case of the Lusitania sunk by a German submarine with the loss of American lives will not be renewed between the United States and Germany pending settlement of the Arabic incident, it was said here today. Although the United States has been notified of Germany's readiness to again take up the Lusitania affair and to offer reparation, the American government will not listen to such a proposal until the situation growing out of the sinking of the Arabic is finally settled. Nothing further on the sinking of the Arabic is looked for from Germany until the submarine commander, who sank the vessel, reports. Through Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, the German government already has announced its intention to offer full satisfaction to the United States for the sinking of the liner. It is well known of course that the United States will not be satisfied unless American lives are paid for and assurances given that similar tragedies will not occur in the future.

While administration officials are much encouraged by the German ambassador's assurances, they will continue to maintain an "open mind" on the sinking of the Arabic until Germany's next communication on the subject is received.

May Seek Lifting of Food Blockade.

Reiterations by American officials that rights of neutrals will be insisted upon in all quarters is taken by German officials to mean that when it is established that Germany has modified her submarine policy England will be asked to relax her blockade against foodstuffs for Germany. German officials believe the change of their policy will permit an acceptance by the United States of the concessions which Germany will make when negotiations are reopened. The state department now regards its case on the Arabic as made up as far as British and American sources of information are concerned. There now remains only the German presentation to afford the department a basis for final decision.

There was no further conference today between Secretary Lansing and Count Bernstorff, and it is understood the latter probably will not call again at the state department until his government is ready to submit the statement it has promised in regard to the Arabic incident.

LONDON PRESS COMMENT.

London, Aug. 28.—The Daily News in an editorial today hazards the suggestion that the submarine which sank the steamship Arabic, has itself since been sunk and that therefore Germany's disavowal of the action of the underwater boat commander becomes comparatively easy. The editorial continues:

"If it is true that Germany is prepared to abandon or suspend her attacks the United States has won a considerable diplomatic victory. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg (German imperial chancellor) sanctioned the attack upon the Arabic or desired to ascerbate the relations with America. The sinking of the Arabic may be assumed with some degree of certainty to have been the malignant trick of his opponents, the Tirpitzites, designed quite as much to embarras him as to drive America to action."

The editorial adds: "If this really has been accomplished the president has struck a shrewd blow for peace in other continents than America. If the United States can impose conditions on limitations on Germany's war methods other nations can do the same and Germany's claim to be her own judge in such matters is once and for all shattered."

The Standard in an editorial on the Arabic says there are several reasons for believing Count Bernstorff is not bluffing, but that it is not probable Germany will abandon her "submarine savagery" altogether.

"There would be fierce complaints over the relinquishment of so potent a weapon at American dictation," says the Standard. "For their own satisfaction the Germans will adopt a pose of making import but not vital concessions out of pure friendship for the United States and it is not likely that President Wilson on his part will stand for the strict letter of his demand. The primary reason for the concession is doubtless the conviction that Mr. Wilson's patience is nearly exhausted and that the next step would mean business."

caped, but one was outdistanced by its pursuers and was riddled by bullets. It fell flaming into the forest of Halatte, where the burned bodies of two aviators were found. The fourth machine dropped five bombs at Mont Morency, a town fifteen miles from Paris. No one was hurt. The batteries at Mont Morency opened fire on the aeroplane, but it got away in the haze.

RUSSIAN LINES PIERCED.

Austro-ermans Successful in Blow at Still Another Point.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Teutonic pressure against the Russians in eastern Galicia has resulted in the piercing of the Russian lines along the Zlota Lipa river, it was officially announced today by German headquarters.

It was also announced that the town of Narew, about twenty miles southeast of Bialystok, had been occupied by the Germans.

Since the Austro-German drive through Galicia in June threw the Russians back upon the line of the Dneister and the Zlota Lipa rivers, late in June, there has been comparative inactivity along this front, so far as the official reports have indicated.

Today's statement from German army headquarters that the Russian lines on the Zlota-Lipa had been broken through, apparently means that the Teutonic forces are renewing their thrusts in Galician territory and have scored a success in the course of an attempt to clear the remainder of that territory of Russian troops, which, if carried to a conclusion, would result in the Russians being forced back into their provinces of Volhynia and Padolia.

DENIAL FROM RUSSIA.

Has No Thought of Making Separate Peace with Central Powers.

London, Aug. 28.—As the Russian armies continue to retreat the foreign and war ministeries at Petrograd deny vigorously that their government has any thought of making a separate peace with the central powers. Special dispatches from Petrograd state that the Russians are on the point of digging themselves in.

Military writers at the Russian capital are of the opinion that the German turning movement in Courland is not likely to threaten Petrograd seriously this autumn, as Field Marshall von Hindenburg apparently has made no progress in his efforts to secure control of the Baltic coast.

The latest news from that region, however, indicates that Germany has not given up the plan for naval co-operation toward this end. Berlin reports that German warships bombarded at two points Dago island, which commands the entrance to the gulf of Finland.

The Russian foreign minister. M. Zazonoff, declares emphatically that there is no disagreement among the allied commanders, and that while a German soldier remains on Russian soil there can be no peace.

The greatest interest is displayed here in reports from Washington of the negotiations between the United States and Germany concerning the Arabic incident. Most of the newspapers consider that President Wilson has won a diplomatic success, the effect of which on the whole question of submarine warfare is certain to be momentous.

Notwithstanding the orders of their leaders, 4,000 more Welsh miners have quit work. The advisability of government control of coal mines is again being discussed here.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY COMING NEXT WEEK

Annual Institute Meeting Will Be Held at High School Building.

Teachers of Allen county will meet next Monday in the high school auditorium for a week of strenuous institute work.

"To the live teacher educational meetings are a thing of interest for it is there that he gets inspiration and practical instruction which will assist him to get good results in the school room," declares D. O. McComb, superintendent of the schools of the county. "It is also an occasion when teachers renew old acquaintances and form new ones. The value of institutes is so apparent that any exhortation to attend is hardly necessary."

Unusually able instructors have been secured for the institute this year. Dr. Carolyn E. Geisel, physician, surgeon, educator and philanthropist, is a brilliant speaker. For fifteen years she has given herself up literally body and soul, to the task of showing people how to live healthier and happier lives.

Dr. A. P. Hollis, in charge of the educational extension department of the agricultural college at Fargo, N. D., the other speaker, was for thirteen years vice president of the largest normal school west of the Mississippi river, located in Valley county, North Dakota.

Readings will be given at each session by Mrs. Almedia B. Waltz. Mrs. Waltz is a graduate from the dramatic art department of Valparaiso university, and also a graduate of the Elias Day school of Lyceum art, Chicago. Music throughout the institute will be furnished by the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music.

Teachers are required to be present at every session of the institute if they wish to receive compensation and credit for attending same. The county superintendent asks that they enroll during the forepart of the week. A teacher from each school corporation, outside the city of Fort Wayne, will be appointed to keep a roll of the attendance of the teachers. Teachers are requested to report twice a day to the roll-keeper for Fort Wayne. A roll-keeper for each school building will be appointed to keep a record of all teachers who taught in the same building last year.

COURT RULING HOLDS UP APPROPRIATIONS

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 28.—Payment of appropriations amounting to nearly $2,000,000 made by the last Illinois legislature was held up by an injunction granted today by Judge Creighton, of the Sangamon county court, restraining State Treasurer Andrew Russell from paying numerous items in the omnibus appropriations bill.

The petition for injunction was filed by John B. Fergus, of Chicago, last July. Pending a decision upon it the salaries of some 400 state employes had been held up. It was held by the court that the governor has the right to veto a part of an item in the omnibus bill without vetoing the entire item.

It has long been the custom for friends of passengers to accompany them aboard steamers. There were 576 passengers on the Phil adelphia among them being sixty-five Americans.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

"Jimmy" Black, Pickpocket and All-Round Bad Man, Once of Fort Wayne, Dies in DeKalb County Infirmary.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 28.—James Black, once widely notorious as "Jimmy" Black, pickpocket, gambler, hard drinker, all-round bad man and a desperately vicious character, died at the DeKalb county infirmary and was buried Friday afternoon without funeral services. He had been an inmate of the farm for over twenty years, having been brought there from the Allen county farm. For many years prior to his being in the Allen county farm he was a member of a gang of pickpockets that operated between Chicago and Lima, O., with headquarters at Fort Wayne, the gang being composed mostly of Fort Wayne characters. He was born in Fort Wayne, never married and has been noted all his life as a notorious "bad man." A hard drinker, he was also very quarrelsome, always looking for trouble, and generally finding it. During one of his sprees he became engaged in a quarrel and was struck on the head with an iron bar that paralyzed him on his right side. That happened some forty years ago, and he never recovered from the results of this blow. He was past seventy years of age and for several years immediately after coming to DeKalb county he would be permitted to come to town to see a sister, Mrs. John Knoder, and an old friend, Henry Trentman, but of late years he was so bad and vicious that he was not allowed to go away and was confined in the county farm lockup. He made many attacks on the warders and also attempted the lives of several of the inmates, and had to be watched all the time.

THAD BUTLER NEAR DEATH.

Huntington, Ind., Aug. 28.—Thad Butler, one of the best known newspaper editors in the state, is lying in a most critical condition at the home of his son, Charles A. Butler, in this city. Besides the family of Charles A. Butler, his daughter, Jean, is in constant attendance. The affliction with which Mr. Butler is affected is hardening of the arteries. His breakdown, however, is general. One week ago last Monday Mr. Butler returned to Huntington from a continued stay at Lake Manitau, near Rochester. Early in the summer a cottage was engaged at the lake, Mr. Butler stating to his friends that he believed a long rest might tend to recuperate him. He returned to Huntington once or twice during the summer, but after going to the lake the last time he became quite ill. Although he refused to remain in bed, his immediate family noted that his condition was not good. As soon as he was able to stand the trip he decided that it might be best for him to return to Huntington. Immediately upon reaching here he took to bed and a physician was summoned.

BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 28.—James Wiswell, the 6-year-old son of Mrs. William Wiswell, had a narrow escape from death Wednesday morning at Geneva while playing around the grist mill. A couple boys had been near the building and one of them, James, went under the cleaning room and climbed on a revolving shaft to ride it. The shaft stuck out only about three feet and before long the lad slid back to the far end where a set screw caught his trousers, twisting and pulling him around the shaft. Fortunately it did not revolve very fast. His companion cried for help and the machinery was stopped. He was taken off the shaft and taken home. The boy's clothes were torn from his body, but the only harm done him were a few bruises.

FOLEY-RUTAN REUNION.

Convoy, O., Aug. 28.—The third annual reunion and picnic of the Foley-Rutan families was held yesterday, August 26, in the John D. Lare grove west of Convoy. The affair was a grand success in every way. The weather was favorable and the best of spirits prevailed in all that were present. The number of those present was eighty-seven. The older folks enjoyed social interminglings. The younger people made merry with foot ball, kite and swings. Then came the customary big dinner to which all did justice. After dinner a musical and literary program was rendered. All the old officers were re-elected.

FACTORY WILL NOT LOCATE.

Lagrange, Ind., Aug. 28.—The A. C. Lucas Electrical Device Co. will not locate in Lagrange after all. It seems the gentlemen who brought their equipment here for the purpose of starting up a factory in the Wade building were not able to meet their part of their agreement and the local committee would not turn over the fund raised here until they did. So many debts were hanging over the Illinois corporation, of which Messrs. Lucas and Wells were a part, that it looked too much like buying a lawsuit to appeal to the Lagrange promoters. They now expect to go to Sturgis instead.

MAY BE FATALLY HURT.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Everette Orn, 21 years old, was seriously, perhaps fatally, hurt near Milford Junction when a team he had beeen driving trod over his body and pulled a heavy gravel wagon upon him when the young man's feet became entangled in the lines. Orn is in a critical condition at his hame two miles southwest of Milford, where he lives with his widowed mother, Mrs. Jemima Orn. The heavy wagon passed over his body at the hips. Several ribs were broken and his hips dislocated and crushed and he probably received other internal injuries.

MARRIED AT BLUFFTON.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Margaret J. Nash and Kent B. Skiles were united in marriage Friday afternoon in a simple nuptial service at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Skiles. Only a small company of friends and relatives were present. Rev. W. T. Arnold, of the First M. E. church, read the service, employing the ring ceremony, which was very simple and impressive. Following the service the company was served with a wedding luncheon. Following the luncheon the bride and groom left for Fort Wayne to take a train for Chicago.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Samuel L. McDaniel, a prominent farmer who resides three miles west of Warsaw, had a miraculous escape from death last night when eastbound Pennsylvania train No. 8 crashed into a frail rig in which he was driving, causing McDaniel to be hurled many feet through the air to the roadside. The pilot of the engine struck the rear wheel of the buggy and the buggy box was lifted up and outward, throwing Mr. McDaniel from the vehicle. Aside from severe bruises McDaniel, who is 76 years old, was unhurt.

INSTITUTE BEGINS MONDAY.

Huntington, Ind., Aug. 28.—Next Monday morning Huntington will be host to the teachers of the city and county schools, the occasion being the beginning of five days of institute work for the teachers. The institute will last until Friday afternoon. This is for all teachers of the county. The instructors for the county institute are Otis W. Caldwell, of the biology department of the University of Chicago, William W. Black, of the department of education of Indiana university, and Thomas L. Gibson, of Baltimore, Md. Mr. Gibson will have charge of the music.

ELOPED TO WED; SEEKS DIVORCE.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 28.—Grace Bowers has filed in the circuit court here a complaint for divorce from William Bowers, with whom she eloped to Michigan to be married March 16, last. Bowers is a Huntington man and his wife in her complaint says he deceived her into marrying him by stories of his abundant means. She finds he has no means and says he never has provided her a home and has accused her of infidelity, charging her with illicit relations with members of her own family, including her father. Her home has always been in this county.

ATTACKED BY COPPERHEAD.

Woodburn, Ind., Aug. 28.—George Guiff, of Milan township, had a most unpleasant experience this week with a copperhead snake. He was mowing weeds along the fence when he stepped onto the snake and before he could realize what it was, it had coiled itself ing he kicked it off before the poisonous tain of industry, his circus interests, serpeant had bitten him. With the scythe, he killed the snake and after measuring found it to be five feet and seven inches long. There had been evidences of a large snake on the farm but no one had before seen it.

TO CLOSE SHIPSHEWANA HOTEL.

Lagrange, Ind., Aug. 28.—P. J. Thompson and family, who have been conducting the Davis hotel at Shipshewana for the past year or more, will close the house after this week and move to Montpelier, Ohio, where they will locate in the same business. The Thompsons are excellent hotel people and the very best of citizens. Before going to Shipshewana they conducted the City hotel in Lagrange, until it was sold to the Heiners, and they made a success of it here.

HOME COMING FOR ZANESVILLE.

Zanesville, Ind., Aug. 28—Home coming will be held in Lennington grove near Zanesville, Sunday, August 29. The residents of Zanesville are making preparations to attend. A very attractive program has been arranged. The refreshments on the grounds including lemonade will be absolutely free. Milo Feightner, of Huntington, and Rev. A. J. Beatty, formerly of Zanesville, will be on the program. Plenty of music both vocal and instrumental, has been arranged. An exceptionally large attendance is expected.

INSANE MAN MAKES ESCAPE.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 28.—Sheriff Marion Egolf has been notified by the authorities at Longcliff insane asylum at Logansport to look out for Silas Herald, a patient from Churubusco, who has escaped from the institution and is now at large. Herald tried to burn down the Churubusco calaboose while he was confined there and while in jail here awaiting removal to Longcliff escaped from the lockup and was recaptured only after a hard chase.

The plant will be run only in case the central plant breaks down.

WILL BE CHILF OF FAIR GATES.

Van Wert, O., Aug. 28.—A. A. Giffin, a well known resident of Van Wert, has just been appointed to act as chief of the gates at the Ohio State fair. Mr. Giffin will have charge of all the gates and men working at them. He left today for Columbus in order to familiarize himself with the work. For a number of years Mr. Giffin has been connected with the Van Wert fair and for several years has had charge of the gates.

Opening of Harrison Hill Monday, Sept. 6, (Labor Day)

On Monday, September 6th, Labor Day, Harrison Hill, the beautiful new home neighborhood, will be thrown open to the public. By that time the paving of Harrison Boulevard will be completed. With the sidewalks already in, and grass sown on the sides and in the parkway, Harrison Boulevard will begin to look a little like it will be when completed, with massive entrance gates, ornamental lights, trees and shrubbery that are yet to come!

Harrison Boulevard
South Wayne's Finest Street

Harrison Boulevard, the main thoroughfare of Harrison Hill, is the finest residence street in all South Wayne. In width, from building line to building line, it is wider than any other—290 feet; with its two drives, its center and side parkways, it measures 145 feet from one property line to the other—ten feet wider than Forest Park Boulevard.

The lots are large—65 to 75 feet wide and over 200 feet deep, with a building line 75 feet back of the property line.

Harrison Boulevard is now paved with asphaltic concrete, the finest known to modern paving science. The sidewalks are already laid. The improvements to come are massive entrance gates, the four center posts standing 16 feet high, ornamental lighting system, a double row of shade trees and tastefully planted shrubbery.

Harrison Boulevard is intended for homes costing to build $4,500 to $9,000. The minimum is kept by restrictions at $4,000.

Big Prizes for the Best Letters!
Read the Details Here

We offer three (3) prizes for the three best letters on the subjects named below. Read our offer:

Here are the instructions:

Write us a letter, in plain simple language, telling us, in your own words and opinion:

First—Why an investment in a city lot pays better than a savings account. Tell us of an actual example, if possible.

Second—Why you consider Harrison Hill the best place to buy a lot on the payment plan.

Third—Why you would like to live in Harrison Hill.

Come out to Harrison Hill on Labor Day; watch our advertisements appearing from time to time in the Sentinel; you will have plenty to write about.

Send your letter to Hilgeman & Schaaf before Saturday, September 11th. Prize winners will be announced as soon as possible after that date.

"The Heart of New South Wayne"

Harrison Hill is the very heart of New South Wayne, that fine new residence district to the south of Rudisill Boulevard.

Its location is superb; its eastern boundary is Calhoun Street, the main thoroughfare of the city; to the west lies Fairfield Avenue, the principal automobile route to South Wayne and a street of most lovely homes. On the north Harrison Hill is bounded by Rudisill Boulevard, 100 feet wide, and part of the "round the city" boulevard system.

Harrison Street, of which Harrison Boulevard is a continuation, extends from the southern to the northern city limits, and with only three blocks yet to be paved will furnish direct motor transit to Harrison Hill.

With nine homes already actually started, Harrison Hill has more than a future—it is a NOW proposition.

Take the Car to Harrison Hill

Take Pontiac car, transfer to Calhoun short line and get off at Rudisill Boulevard. Calhoun street is paved ALL the way, Harrison Street all but three blocks, giving easy access to automobiles. Labor Day will not be a sale day at Harrison Hill; merely an opening day, that all Fort Wayne may see what we are doing.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Mark 10:28-40.

28 Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

29 And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's.

30 But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

31 But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32 And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him.

33 Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles.

34 And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again.

35 And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of: and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

A Victory Worth While

Developments of the past few days in the dispute between the United States and Germany over submarine practices in warfare can not fail to be immensely gratifying to every American citizen. Not only is the situation gratifying because of the lessening of a tension most grave in character, but because no victory on the blood-stained fields of this war can compare with the president's victory for humanity and for peace. It has cost no thousands of American citizen-soldier lives and no wealth of treasure that leaves poverty and hardship in its wake.

The imperial German ambassador has conveyed to the American state department the fact that orders have been issued to German naval commanders to attack no merchant ship of a belligerent nation without due warning and consequent opportunity for escape with life by non-combatants. This is the big point for which President Wilson has been contending in his interchange of notes with the warring nations. With rare good sense, with calm firmness, refusing to be stampeded into reckless action and with unfailing respect and courtesy for divergent views, the president has carried his argument to the point where his contentions have been recognized and accepted.

Nor is Germany's yielding of the point which she has contended heretofore to be vital to her interests in the situation forced upon her to be taken as any indication of weakness. The concession carries with it no humiliation and no lowering of either dignity or prestige. Rather, on the other hand, it is the manifestation of an exalted national spirit that first of all desires to be right and to be just and to continue to enjoy the respect of the civilized world. The President's course has been assailed again and again by those who would apply to national affairs the all too prevalent personal proclivity for trouble-hunting. With a different type of man in the white house the United States would have long ago been plunged into the abyss of the world war. Patiently, firmly, calmly, sanely, President Wilson has been performing a gigantic task. There is new reason for thankfulness that the right sort of president is in direction of our affairs in these ticklish times.

Down at Evansville just now there are in progress some reform upheavals that look much like the genuine thing, and Mayor Bosse is apparently setting about in earnest to redeem his promise to enforce the liquor laws in the river town. When the movement started by rounding up some of the smaller offenders in the outskirts of the city, there was little excitement. The people preferred to wait until they were "shown." Now that evidence is being piled up against liquor men of prominence, and some of them presumed to be close to the city administration, Evansville is beginning to sit up and take notice.

The Alabama house of delegates has just voted down a bill to submit the question of equal suffrage to a vote of the people of that state, and did it rather vehemently, too, following similar action taken by the Indian legislature last spring. But the "cause" has reached a stage of virility where it rather thrives on that sort of thing, and increasingly hostile opposition only serves to spur its friends to still more forceful efforts. The ballot for women may be delayed somewhat, but it is the one big eventual certainty on the horizon of American politics. Even its most energetic foes are now constrained to admit that fact in confidence, however sturdily they seek to forestall its consummation.

The first complete cure has just been reported from the camp which Allen county has provided at the new county farm, north of the city, for the care of tubercular patients. A young woman has just been discharged from the institution, having made complete recovery under the ministrations of fresh air, proper care and suitable diet. And this is but the beginning of the work of life-saving that will be increasingly benificent as the years go by. Allen county has done no more important work in recent years than the provision for the anti-tuberculosis camp.

The late John Condon, the blind Chicago gambler, who in early days operated in Fort Wayne, is said to have left an estate of some $460,000 to his widow and two children. This fact, however, should not tempt other aspirants for wealth to follow in Condon's pathway. This is doubtless the exception that proves the general rule that the life of the gambler ends in poverty. It is in most cases the friends who are called upon to provide burial expenses for the man who has spent his life in flirting with the fickle goddess of chance.

With Flashlight and Gun Woman "Policeman" Runs Vice to Cover

"I Turned Flashlight on Dark Corners; There Was a Gun and Nerve to Back Up What I Did," Says Mrs. Frisinger.

(By Honor Fanning.)

Hoopeston, Ill., Aug. 28.—This town, in the center of the middle west corn belt, is no longer famous merely for its canned corn. Now it owes its greatest fame to a Mrs. Agnes Frisinger, the "woman policeman" who's making Hoopeston walk the chalk line.

"Tell the Sentinel readers how you 'cleaned up' Hoopeston?" I asked Mrs. Frisinger when I called on her in the Hoopeston town hall.

"I started to work just as a housekeeper would if she were cleaning her kitchen. I located the dirty spots—high and low and in the corners—and then I went after them not with a broom, but with a flashlight, and there was a gun and a billy back of that flashlight.

"I had full permission from the city council to go after the wrongdoers wherever I found them in queer places and I went after them in queer ways.

"One Sunday not long ago I crawled on my hands and knees for a quarter of a mile through the wheat fields to break up a crap game on the railroad right of way. Holding my revolver cocked in my hand I crept along until I got within arm's length of them. I watched them for fifteen minutes so that I could identify them later on if they got away from me. Finally I stepped out in the open, my finger on the trigger of my gun—there were ten men against one woman. I knew I couldn't make arrests, but I confiscated a dice box, a bottle of whisky—and this is a dry town—and the carpet used as a gaming table.

"Two little girls were crossing the city park one night, a man tried to coax them to ride with him. I was watching from behind a clump of bushes. I stepped out, my gun leveled at the man and told him he was under arrest. He jumped in his buggy and got away, I pursued him for a couple of blocks, firing in the air to let him know I was coming. He hasn't been seen in Hoopeston since, and little girls in the parks are safer because I wasn't afraid to use a gun.

"The first night I walked a beat here I went to the park where I knew a gang of boys gathered. I ordered them to 'move on.' They didn't move, just laughed at me. They laughed first, but my gun laughed last. I shot into the ground, no one was hurt, but the gang was scared and it doesn't gather on that corner any more.

MRS. AGNES FRISINGER, POLICE OFFICER, WHO KNOWS HOW TO USE A GUN—AND USES ONE.

"I tell you of these three instances to illustrate the way I work in Hoopeston. I don't preach, that isn't a policewoman's business. I find out what the laws are and then I see that they are observed. It can be done, though some men police officers don't seem to think so.

"I've been warned that my life is in danger. There may be some truth in it. But they can't frighten me with threats. The girls and boys must be protected from evil influence. It's my business to give them protection even though the job isn't a very safe one."

Mrs. Frisinger was brought to Hoopeston last May when the "committee of fifty," composed of club women, decided that the youth of the town needed protection from an undesirable element attracted to the place each summer by the corn canning industry.

HOW INDIANA DOES IT.

(Grand Rapids News.)

The public-spirited men of Indianapolis have awakened to a realization of what the national guard means to a state. They are making plans to raise $500,000 with which to build a regimental armory for the Indiana national guard.

One of the means of raising money is to be a great military and war spectacle, to be held Monday, Sept. 6, at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The proceeds of this entertainment will go entirely to the armory fund. The spectacle will be caller "War in Indiana," and will consist of a demonstration of military tactics as employed in the European war today. Fully 2,500 members of the national guard will take part in this spectacle.

Already the movement to build a regimental armory in Indianapolis, of which plan the military tournament is a part, has attracted nation-wide attention as "a citizens' movement to develop the national guard of the United States" and it is the expectation of the Indianapolis organizations which have the building project in hand, that other cities throughout the state, in which are located militia companies, will be encouraged to take up and carry forward similar projects in their communities, to the end that adequate armories may be provided, either by the state or otherwise, for every company of the Indiana national guard.

The Indianapolis commercial and civic bodies, recognizing the importance of encouraging the citizen soldiery, are working hard for the regimental armory. Resolutions adopted by these bodies express the belief "that it is the patriotic duty of every law-abiding citizen to see that the men of the Indiana national guard are surrounded with proper and beneficial influences, such as adequate armories and congenial environment, so that their moral, intellectual and physical attributes may be properly developed along with their acquirement of military training."

The commercial and civic bodies of Michgan could do no better than to exhibit some of the spirit of the Indianapolis people. The United States never will be a military nation, hence the necessity of having our national guard recruited to the limit and giving it every facility and the best of armories.

BARLEYCORN, CHAUFFEUR.

(Philadelphia, Pa., Telegraph.)

J. Barleycorn is a bad chauffeur. His hands shake, his knees wobble, his evesight is poor and his conscience half asleep. And anyone who permits this reckless driver to sit at the wheel of a motor car is a menace to life. This is why little sympathy is felt for the Baltimore man just sentenced to two years in the penitentiary because, while intoxicated, he ran down and killed a woman. And if this convict fancies himself the victim of a great injustice, he should compare his fate with that of the woman whose neck his carelessness broke. One does not have to be intoxicated to deserve prison for reckless driving. Nor does one have to be rich, as the Baltimore man is. Indeed, the plight of this man should have an equally sobering effect upon all careless drivers, tipplers, tectotalers, plutocratic and poor.

FARMER'S WORD OF WARNING.

Locust Grove, R. F. D. 2, St. Joe, Aug. 24.—To the Editor of The Sentinel:—Please say that auto drivers would better be more courteous to farmers and not recklessly run down and kill stock that chances to get out upon the highway. Mr. Chauffeur you have the same right to the public highway that farmers and others have but no more. Please slow up for teams and stock that gets out on the highway. Half of the road is yours, but the other half is ours. That chap who ran over three big hogs between Robison park and Cedarville last Sunday would better whack up. Our eye is upon you. A FARMER.

SYSTEM OF TAXATION FLAYED BY SPEAKERS

Fort Wayne Civic Forum Meets at South Wayne School.

Indiana's system of taxation was bitterly assailed Friday evening at a meeting of the Fort Wayne Civic Forum in the auditorium of the South Wayne school.

Several discrepancies in the present tax system were pointed out by Attorney W. C. Clapham. Ross F. Lockridge, secretary of the Citizens' League of Indiana, declared he favored the abolition of the general property tax or a change in the constitution of the state. The speaker advocated the separation of local and state tax sources so that the state taxes would be evenly divided among the counties according to population. He would also divorce the taxation system from party politics by instituting a civil service scheme for assessors.

Calvin Brown, former county auditor, defended the tax ferret system. He declared that the state should be divided into four districts with a state tax commission of five or seven men to equaliz the system of taxation in these districts. He advocated the appointment of a commission to serve throughout the year with a certain number as hold over members.

Attorney Glenn Smiley presided and made a short talk in which he pointed out two distinct evils in the tax system as follows: The naming of men for assessors who do not know property values and the uneven distribution of taxes.

The following committee was appointed to arrange for meetings in other sections of the city: Charles Phelps, W. E. Clapham and F. J. Young.

TO PROVIDE SMOKING DEN FOR AGED WOMAN

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28.—A silent little group of gray haired women, most of them grandmothers, resting easily in comfortable rocking chairs with thin, blue ribbons of smoke rising from their meerschaums and calibash pipes, will be one of the modernisms at the new $150,000 women's building now in process of completion at the Ramsey county poor farm. For the old ladies are to have an elaborate smoking room, fitted in modern style, and, said Mrs. Albert Moore, wife of the farm superintendent today, "if the dear old souls want the walls covered with pictures of race horses, prize fighters and ball players, they may have them.

"When we took a poll of the old ladies regarding the establishment of a den for smoking," she continued, "there was hardly a dissenting voice. We shall furnish the tobacco and we expect the 'smoker' to be one of the most popular places of the institution."

ANOTHER BIG GOLD SHIPMENT EN ROUTE

Vanceboro, Maine, Aug. 28.—The second large shipment this month of gold and securities from London to New York passed through here today on a special train. It was said here that it consisted of bonds to the value of $25,000,000 and $10,000,000 in gold.

The gold and securities are being forwarded to strengthen British credit in this country and to arrest the decline in value of the British sovereign. They were placed on a heavily guarded train at Halifax, where, it was understood, they had arrived on a British battleship guarded by a convoy of smaller craft.

The train was made up of six steel express cars, a dining car and a coach and carried thirty-eight express guards. The shipment was being forwarded by an express company in much the same manner as was the first consignment early in August when $52,000,000 in gold and securities were sent from London and deposited in the sub-treasury in New York to the account of J. P. Morgan and Co., the fiscal agents of the British government. After a very brief stop here to permit a change of engines the train left at 9 o'clock for Bangor on its way to New York.

MARSHALL PUZZLED OVER WAR'S CAUSE

Vice President Unable to See Why Conflict is Being Fought.

Edwardsville, Ill., Aug. 28.—"I have read with great care the history of all the European countries for the last 100 years and I have read all the state documents issued in connection with the present war, but I confess that I don't know why this war is being fought," declared Vice President Marshall in an address here.

Speaking of immigrants, Mr. Marshall said: "I believe in inviting the foreigners of all nations to come to the United States, but when they do come here they must assimilate. If a man cannot concentrate on the needs of the United States and take his mind off the country from whence he came the man should go back. STRETCH THE PIKE STRIEDER'S ORDER

Fair Manager Reports Tremendous Demand for Concessions.

"Stretch the pike" is the word that Secretary-Manager P. T. Strieder of the Fort Wayne Fair gave the grounds superintendent today on his return from a whirl round this week's Indiana and Ohio fair circuit. The emissary of Fort Wayne's crack fair, which is billed to open at the new fair grounds two weeks from next Tuesday, says that never in his life has he found the booking of concessions and pike shows so much a matter of picking and choosing as this year. There are scores of big pike attractions that are simply falling over themselves for bookings for the week September 14-18 and the mile of front originally set aside for the pike will not be sufficient to accommodate all the exhibitions for which contracts already have been signed. Wild animals, wild men and dancing girls, athletic shows, freaks, crystal mazes, etc., have been booked by the score for this year's elongated pike. The Claude Hamilton Wonder shows of course will be the center and prime attraction on the pike as this pretentious tented exhibition is a young carnival in itself.

An army may travel on its stomach, but a fair crowd travels on street cars, interurbans and railroad trains. The Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana will take care of the street car and interurban car end of this transportation feature. Special services will be installed on the Bluffton and the Huntington lines. Ever since the dates of the fair were posted along the company's lines, inquiries have been pouring into the transportation superintendent's office from agents along the line, as to the arrangements for carrying people to and from Fort Wayne. All the cars that can be spared will be pressed into operation. The city service of course will be almost instantaneous. The double track all the way will admit of the company's placing almost unlimited cars in service during the rush hours and there will be none of the irritating waits that detracted so materially from the pleasures of a day at the old fair grounds. The ground superintendent is making special provisions for parking autos and buggies.

If the club women of the country follow a suggestion made by Mrs. William Alexander, of New York city, for the coming winter, papers on numerous and various topics of art, philanthropy, literature and history may be put on the list of things to be done another day, while the club women put their fingers to work making kits for regular and volunteer soldiers of the United States army. Mrs. Alexander in her article notes with many other observers of conditions, a general one of unpreparedness for adequate national defense. Therefore her appeal to women to sew for the soldiers. Samples of kits will be sent out and it is not improbable that the spirit of patriotism will imbue more club women than those who compose the "Daughters of the American Revolution." Local club women who have been asked concerning their willingness to sew for this purpose even at the expense of the usual literary programs, are enthusiastic about the subject.

The European School of Music has taken new quarters at 117 Washington boulevard west, over the Cadillac Motor Sales company rooms and will open the first of September in the new studios. George Bailhe, the head of the school, announces that he has engaged the well known baritone singer, David Baxter, as vocal teacher. The other members of the Bailhe Trio, Gaston Bailhe, violinist, and Emmeran Stoeber, cellist, are prominent members of the faculty.

Exceptionally pretty girls have been selected as contestants in the popularity contest at Robison park on romp day, Wednesday, September 1. Every person attending will be privileged to vote for their favorite or the one they think is the most beautiful or popular. As is shown by the above pictures the task is not an easy one because they are all equally charming and lovely.

Manager C. H. Williams reports that greater interest is being taken in the contest than ever before. More inquiries have been made and when the final count is taken of the ballots cast it is almost certain that the result will be close.

Various Ages Represented.

All ages of girls attending romp day are represented in the ages of the contestants, ranging from five to fourteen years. Little Leona Klaren is the youngest. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Klaren, 533 LeSalle street. Mr. Klaren is an engine inspector at the Pennsylvania round house. Miss Bessie Joyce is just entering high school and will be a freshman this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Joyce, 1324 Hanna street. Mr. Joyce is in the grocery business.

Doris Welker is nine years old and is a pupil at the Jefferson school. She is the daughter of C. J. Welker, of an East Berry street dry goods store, and lives at 232 Brackenridge street. Gladys Underwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Underwood, 476 Elizabeth street. Miss Gladys is thirteen years old and is in the 7A grade at the Clay school. LaVerne Connell is seven years old and is the daughter of James Connell, deputy game warden. Little LeVerne's mother is dead and she lives with her grandmother at 1019 Taylor street. She is in the third grade at the Miner school. Katherine Raidy attends St. Patrick's school and is eleven years old. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Raidy. Mr. Raidy is a machinist in the Pennsylvania shops.

Friends Are Working.

The six charming girls are the very embodiment of all that is sweet and lovely in innocent girlhood, and all of them have a host of admiring friends who will work enthusiastically for them in the contest. Manager Williams explains that the popularity contest is for the purpose of providing entertainment and pleasure, not only for the girls themselves but for their friends. Each contestant will be awarded a keepsake for the occasion.

FLUFFY NEW FROCK FOR FIRST FALL DANCES.

BY BETTY BROWN.

For the dancing parties that begin in early September a charming frock is this one, made of white taffeta and hand beaded novelty. The lace forms a hood effect at the back of the waist and falls gracefully into the tunic over the cream white taffeta skirt.

The waist line is just a bit above the regular line, and the bottom of the skirt is finished with the puff scallops that are to be so popular during the coming season. The black velvet bow with streamers dropping to the skirt bottom contrast against the white silk give a very good line and make a pretty

ALMOST THE RECORD FOR BABY'S HEALTH

But Two Deaths This Summer in Fort Wayne from Infantum.

The record of but two deaths from cholera infantum or related summer maladies that attack babyhood and traceable to milk, have been written up to this time in Fort Wayne or the present season, and Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the health board hopes to hold the record at that figure. This is almost the local record for all time since health chronicles were officially kept in Fort Wayne. In 1912 there was but one death from summer complaint, at which time Fort Wayne ranked with Montclair, N. J., a much smaller city, which claimed the honors for protecting infantile life by guarding its milk supply. The splendid showing thus far made argues well for the vigilance with which the milk supply of this city is inspected, and the rigor with which the regulations are enforced. One of the two deaths was in a household where no use was made of ice, and the other was traced to the dairyman who supplies the family with the milk upon which the lost infant had been fed. Dr. Gilpin believes that no other city of the country approximating Fort Wayne in population, can come near this record.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO PARK BOARD.

Lavish praise is bestowed on the administration of the Fort Wayne park department, and especially upon the board of park commissioners by the state board of accounts in its report on the administration of the municipal park system and its administration during the period from January 1, 1910, to January 1, 1915, the term covered by the report. The report shows that Fort Wayne has invested in parks a total cash sum of $135,447.33, which includes the $13,200 paid for Swinney park during the more than twenty years it has been under city administration. Current valuations have been placed upon the realty embraced in Fort Wayne parks as follows by Field Examiners Haefling and Schrader, who made the examination: Old Fort park, $800; Lawton, $34,516; Reservoir, $24,000; Orff, $5,500; Swinney park addition, $8,200; Guildin playgrounds, $7,011.67; Lakeside, $7,800; Camp Allen, $1,284.83; Weisser, $10,500; park strips, $1,284.83; Hayden, $4,500, and gravel pits, $16,850. The parks donated to the city are as follows: McCulloch, Williams, Swinney, Foster, Pontiac Place, J. H. Vesey, A. R. Hirons, Rockhill, a portion of Hayden and a number of park strips. The total park area is 262.57 acres and the present value of $662,500 or nearly five times the cost of the acquisition.

The encomiums given by the state board of accounts to the Fort Wayne citizens who have served upon the local park board are an exalting tribute to their efficiency, enthusiasm and unselfishness, and call attention to the fact that though they have been men very busy with their personal affairs they have given their time and efforts to the work for which they were appointed.

The report is concluded with these words:

"They have seen the possibilities in the way of beautifying the city and have looked forward to the time when their work should be well on the way and be appreciated. In fact, at times they have become over enthusiastic and have gone farther than their finances would permit, making necessary the borrowing of funds to tide them over until revenues were available, but they have given splendid service with no idea except for the good of the city and their work should be deeply appreciated by the citizens. An example of their interest in the parks of Fort Wayne is shown in the fact that one member donated a large tract of ground to the city for park purposes and another has purchased a tract of land adjoining one of the present parks with the intention of holding it until the city shall be able to purchase it for park purposes and at the same price paid by him, thereby saving the city the additional cost of the increase in value at a later date, and to prevent it being subdivided and placed on the market. The secretary of the board has kept his records in a very excellent shape and has the affairs of his office systematized to a high degree and has shown the closest attention to detail. He is much interested in the work and is giving excellent service.

COUNCIL PICNIC SUNDAY.

The City's Fathers Will Be Hosts at Cipple Club in Annual Feast.

The annual picnic of the city council of Fort Wayne, will be held all day Sunday at the Cripple club's grounds, on the St. Joe river, above Robison park. There will be no formal program, but there will be plenty doing and the usual abundance of things to eat. This year's picnic will be signalized by the absence of the kangaroo court, that made a great hit last year and hit everybody for a cash fine of a dollar or so with judicial impartality. City Attorney Guy Colerick has taken the personal pledge of every member of the council that he shall be treated with the respect, courtesy and consideration that are due to the dignity of a newly married man. Not only the members of the council, but practically all the officials of the municipal government and their staffs will be present at the picnic. The picnickers will begin to start for the woods at 8 o'clock, meeting at the city hall and making the trip in automobiles.

DID SOME BURLY BRIGAND START STYLE OF FANTASTIC HEAD SCARF?

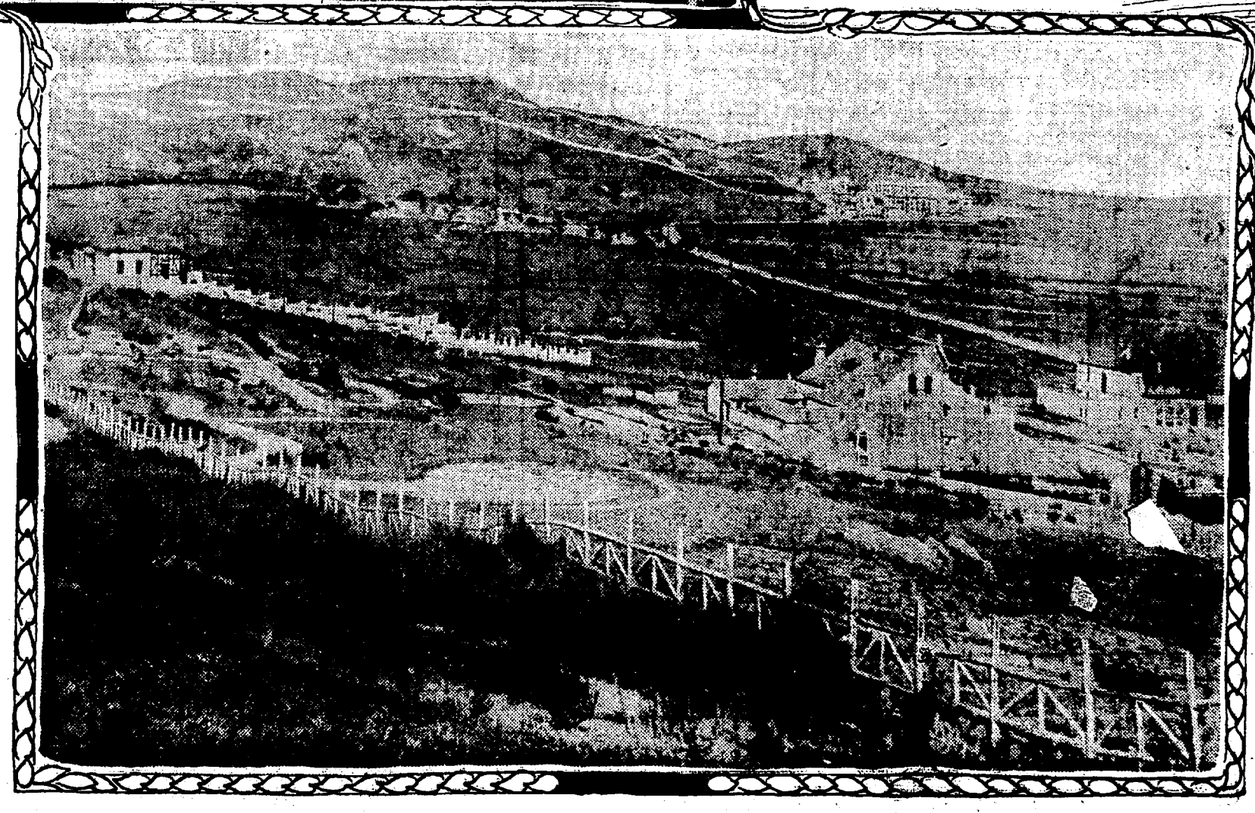
A hat is no longer sufficient crown for lovely woman's head—she wears also a scarf. A gaily colored piratical thing that might fitly adorn the head of a brigand. The new head scarf may be fantastic, but nevertheless it's one of the fashions that promises to be popular this fall. It's sometimes of crepe, and sometimes silk, but it's always in gay stripes, and it's swathed about the head so as to almost entirely cover the hair and make a great splash of color beneath a small turban.

AMERICA TO SLAY THE WORLD'S DISEASE GERMS

Major Gen. Gorgas, Backed By Carnegie Foundation Will Visit Orient Next to Stamp Out the Deadly Plagues---War On Yellow Fever and Malaria and Battles Against Bubonic Plague Are to Be Waged to a Finish By This Master Of Tropical Ills and Germs

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM C. GORGAS

ALONG THE PANAMA CANAL



KIAO CHOW, CHINA, WHERE THE GERM BATTLES WILL RAGE

The complete eradication of epidemic disease from the world is entirely possible by eliminating conditions which favor them, according to Major General William C. Gorgas, whose work in cleaning up the Panama Canal zone gives authority to his words.

It will be recalled that Gorgas' undertaking was almost as gigantic as that of Col. Goethals for the former had to eradicate yellow fevér and the mosquitos that carried it before the real work of construction could be undertaken. By means of anilin dyes Gorgas learned that the mosquitos carrying the germ of yellow fever came from certain swamps and by pumping dry the swamps the disease was stamped out.

Gorgas obtained absolute proof against the mosquitos by establishing that those caught in the sleeping quarters of the men, bore blue, yellow or red markings, indicating that they came from the different swamps where the colors had been placed.

It is now understood that the Rockefeller foundation has engaged Gen. Gorgas to undertake, as soon as he finishes his work in the Canal Zone, a campaign to stamp out yellow fever from all countries where it now exists.

A FORMIDABLE TASK.

"The task of cleaning up the world," said Gen. Gorgas in a recent interview, "with a view to getting rid of the great epidemic diseases which are wholesale destroyers of mankind, seems at first glance very formidable, but it is bound to be undertaken and will be accomplished more easily and with more rapidity than the average layman would be inclined to expect.

"Where epidemic diseases, such as yellow fever are concerned, it may be said that we have them at a certain disadvantage. The bacterial or other germs that caused them—in the case of yellow fever it is an animal parasite—are manifestly living and propagating their species under conditions not favorable to their survival. If the situation were otherwise the maladies they engender would not be epidemic in character, for the very word epidemic means that such onslaughts are only temporary.

"It is to be inferred then that these germs are able to do mischief only when conditions, through one sort of accident or another, happen to favor them.

"Accordingly our task is to eliminate such favoring conditions, as was done in the Canal Zone, for instance, by draining swamps and adopting other measures calculated to discourage the breeding of the particular species of mosquito that is the sole carrier of yellow fever, and in the absence of which this disease cannot possibly exist.

MALARIA COMES NEXT.

"Yellow fever no longer is the menace to mankind it was a century ago. Now that we know its cause and how to deal with it there is no question but that we can get rid of it altogether. One hundred years from now a case of it probably will be regarded as a medical curiosity."

Malaria, he said, is much more formidable as well as more prevalent. It also is carried by a mosquito and he thinks it will ultimately be conquered and that as a result millions of acres of the richest land in the tropics will be opened to white settlement. In the past these lands were uninhabitable, especially to white people because of the prevalence of yellow fever and malaria, but by draining all swamps and thus destroying mosquitos by giving them no place to breed, these rich lands will be again thrown open.

Cholera is another epidemic disease which he thinks will be eradicated. Of it he says:

"The presumption is that its germs under ordinary conditions find circumstances unfavorable to their survival and propagation. Such being the case they die out and the epidemic comes to an end. But given the requisite conditions—unclean living among human beings, obviously supplies them—and the malady may hold out indefinitely, killing people like flies.

CHOLERA IN INDIA.

"Such conditions are found in northern India, where cholera is endemic; in other words permanently established. Mohammedan pilgrims journeying to Mecca from that part of the world carry cholera with them, and to these pious wayfarers are attributed distributions of the infection which for centuries past have given rise to plagues of the disease invading Europe and even our own country.

"On the whole, however, cholera may be regarded as a disappearing disease. Its range is becoming restricted. The great epidemics of it which formerly devastated Europe at frequent intervals are not likely to recur.

"The best protection against it lies in the knowledge we recently have gained as to its cause. If drinking water be boiled any germs that it contains will be killed and it cannot convey infection.

"Fresh vegetables may under certain conditions carry the germs; it is safest to cook them. Of utmost importance is the careful washing of the hands.

"When the western world has been cleaned up the Orient will remain, at least for a long time, a breeding place for some of the worst diseases we know. Bubonic plague seems to have originated in a province in China, where it is permanently established and whence it has spread all over the world.

"When crowded populations dwell amid unsanitary surroundings as they do in China and India and are afflicted by an extreme and almost universal poverty, the task of cleaning up is well nigh hopeless—at best beset by extraordinary difficulties. Viewing such conditions one is not surprised that cholera should take an enormous toll of death annually in India, or that plague should do the same—more than 2,000,000 lives being wiped out not long ago in a single twelvemonth by an epidemic of the latter malady.

"Bubonic plague is a malady or disease of rats. The rat harbors fleas which, deriving the infection from the rodent animal, bites people, thus communicating it to human beings.

SPREADS LIKE WILD FIRE.

"When the malady reaches a certain point of prevalence the germs get into the air; people breathe them and the disease assumes the so-called pneumonic form. In this stage it spreads like wildfire; the victims die in a few hours and whole populations are wiped out to the last man, woman and child

"No wonder that the 'black death,' as it was called, worked such wholesale destruction in Europe in the earlier centuries when from time to time it spread to that part of the world. Sanitation in Europe in those days was much on par with what it is now in the Orient. We do not realize how new the idea of cleanliness is to mankind.

"The frequent bath is a very modern idea; likewise the notion of cleanliness in the household. The days of old when knights were bold and barons held their sway hold conceptions of romance from our present point of view, but they were the age of filth and rats and all kinds of disease-carrying vermin.

"Plague, although a serious menace, no longer alarms us very greatly because we know what causes it and how to get rid of it. Destroy the rats and it will disappear."

Leprosy and smallpox, well known diseases, the seriousness of which he points out, have been greatly reduced in the last few generations.

Cases of leprosy are not near as humorous as they were years ago. This he attributes largely to the fact that people now change their clothes oftener and as a rule bathe at least once a week. Better living conditions often have a great deal to do with it, says Gen. Gorgas.

VACCINATION HAS HELPED.

The malignancy of smallpox, he explains, has been reduced by vaccination. At one time it was one of the most dreaded plagues in the world and almost wiped out entire nations. The measures science has taken to oppose it have reduced it to a milder form and it seldom bothers communities where cleanliness is practiced.

"In the course of ages," Gen. Gorgas said, "certain minute plants, which we call bacteria, have adopted presumably through accidental circumstances, a parasitic habit with regard to man. When opportunity serves they take advantage of it to live at his expense, feeding on the tissues of the body. The same is true of certain minute forms of animal life—as in the case of the malaria germ which is a protozoan. Such proceedings on their part engender various derangements of physical structure of function which we call diseases."

TO KILL ALL MOSQUITOS.

The gigantic task before Gen. Gorgas in freeing the world of parasitic diseases can be imagined from the fact that he intends practically to kill all the mosquitoes in the world by destroying their breeding places, that he will make an effort to have all rats caught in places where the bubonic plague is prevalent and that he will spread the gospel of cleanliness among nations that have never known anything but dirt and disease.

Gen. Gorgas also will have to fight Asiatic cholera, a disease that has been prevalent in the land of the Hindoos as long as that country has been known to Europeans. When Vasco de Gama rounded the southermost he little thought he was soon to meet with a new and dreadful pestilence. In 1498 he landed on the Malabar coast of India.

In 1503, Gaspar Correa, one of his officers, reported "20,000 men of Calcutta died of a disease which struck them suddenlike in the belly so that some of them died in eight hours."

In 1545 he met with it at Goa, further up the west coast, where it was called Morexy, "and the mortality was so great that the dead could hardly be buried," writes Correa, "so grievious was the throe and so bad the sort of disease that the very worst sort of poison seemed to be in operation; as was proved by the [illegible]uiting, with great drouth for wa[illegible]r as if the stomach was parched [illegible]; by the cramps that fixed in the knews with pain so extreme that he sufferer seemed at the point of leath and the nails of the hands and feet becoming black."

In 1563 Garsia d'Orta, another Portugese explorer, gave a vivid description of cholera again at Goa, where it was called hachaiza or haiza, a name by which it is known throughout India even at the present day.

This is the earliest history of the dread Asiatic cholera, that disease caused by the bacilli col communis, and the greatest foe with which Gen. Gorgas will contend when he goes forth to conquer the diseases of the world.

Major General William Gorgas, conqueror of yellow fever in the Panama Canal Zone, soon will take up the gigantic task of cleaning the world of epidemic disease and is confident he can do it. He will be financed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

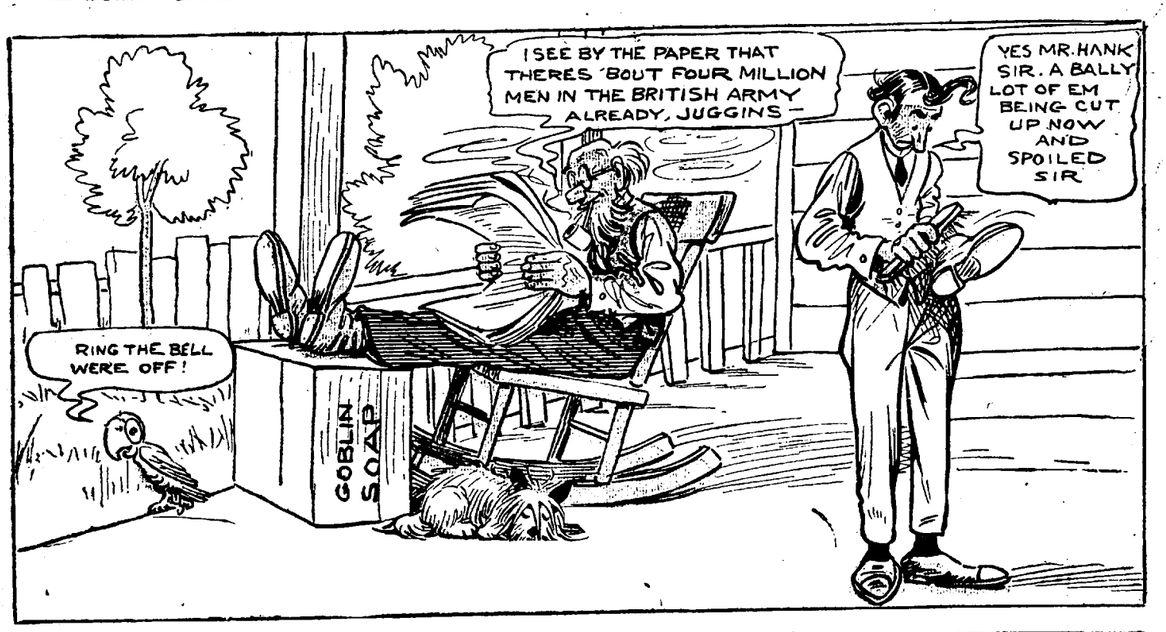
He believes that by eradicating mosquitos by destroying their breeding places, he will quickly conquer yellow fever, malaria and other diseases communicated by these insects.

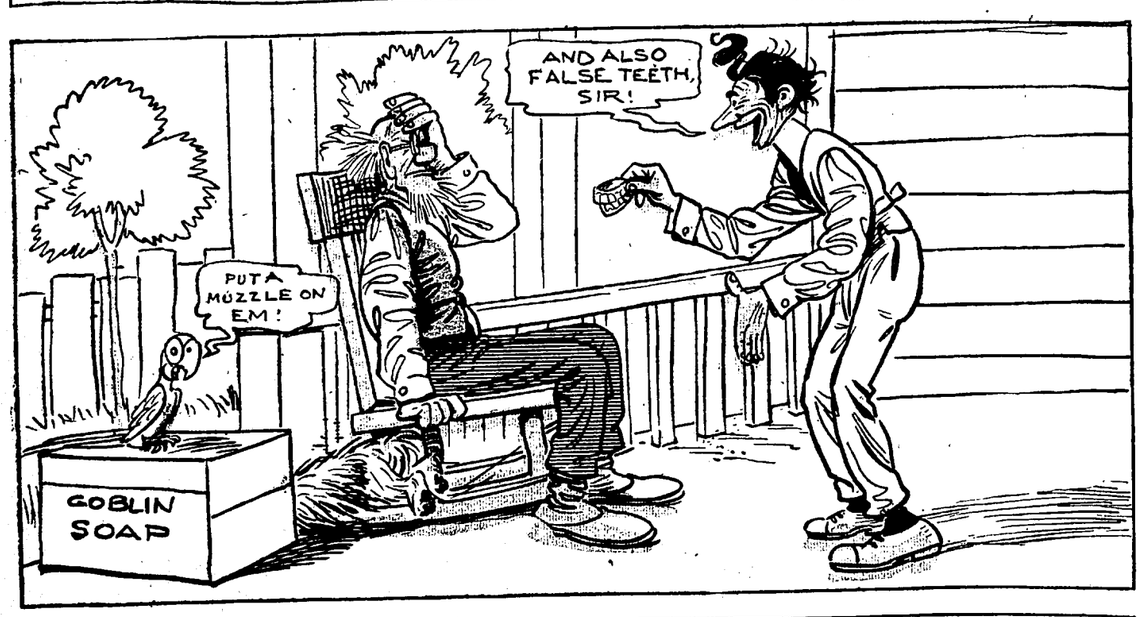
Gorgas will free the world of bubonic plague by killing all the rats in places of epidemic.

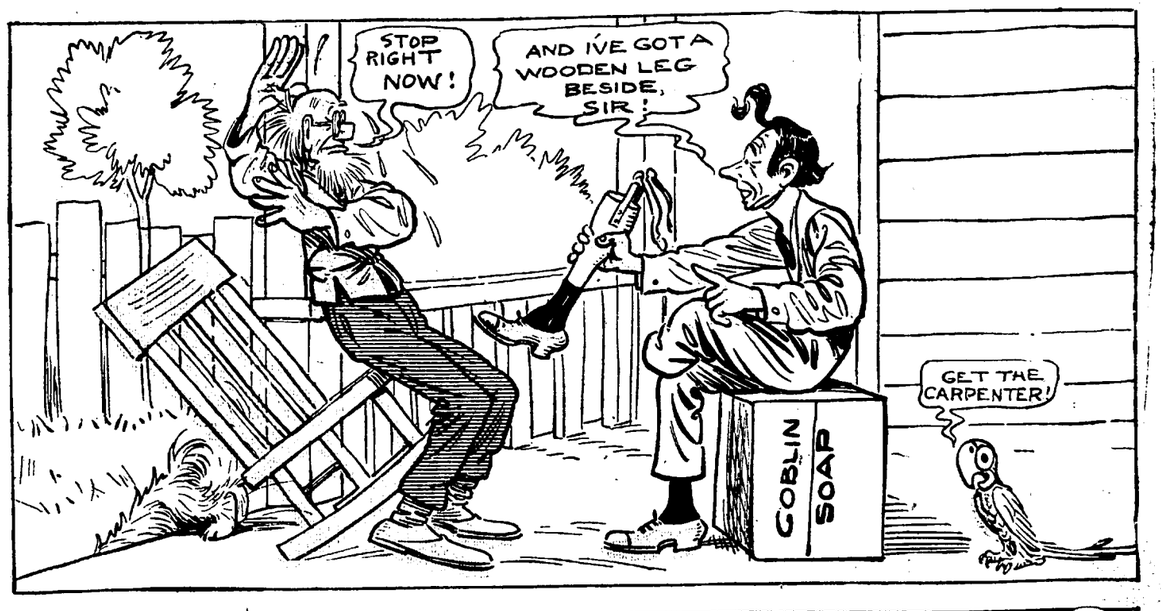
His most arduous task will be teaching cleanliness and sanitation to the people of the Orient in an effort to eradicate that scourge—Asiatic cholera.

He believes that cleanliness and frequent bathing will prevent the majority of infectuous diseases.

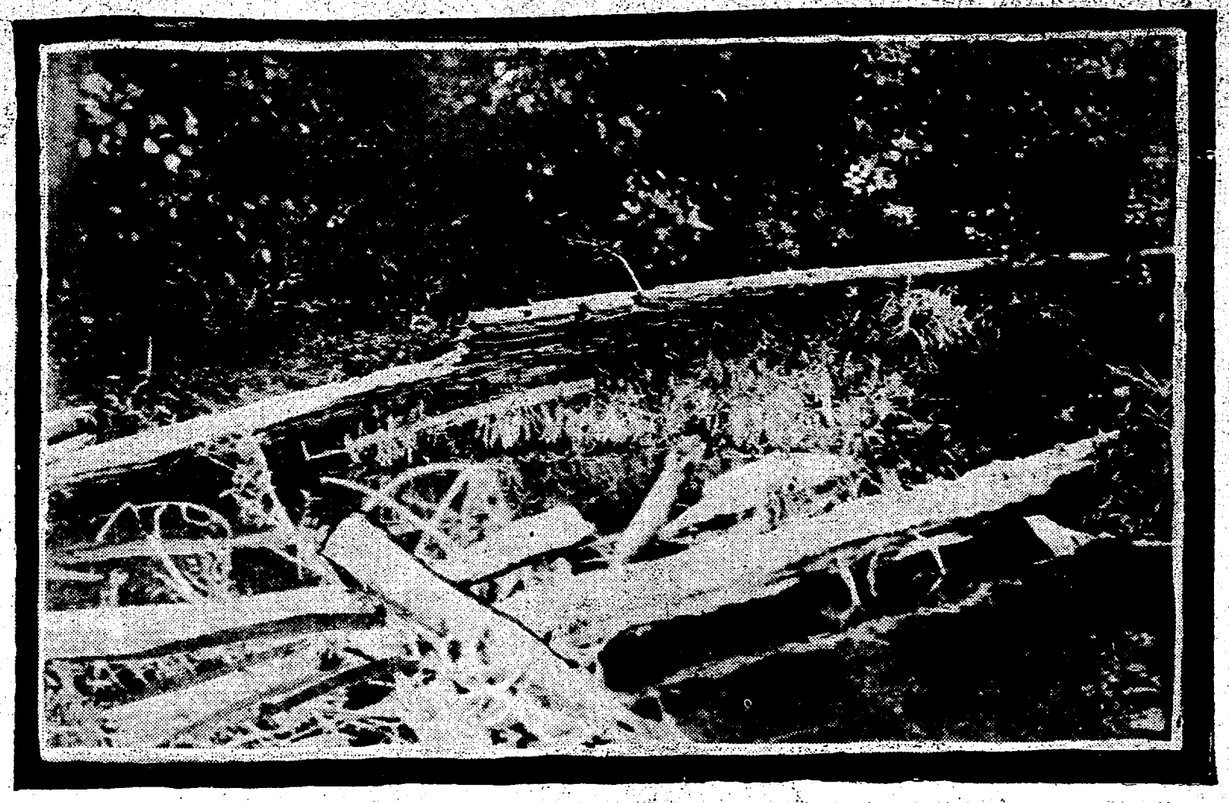
HANK: AND HIS ANIMAL FRIENDS By Walt McDougall

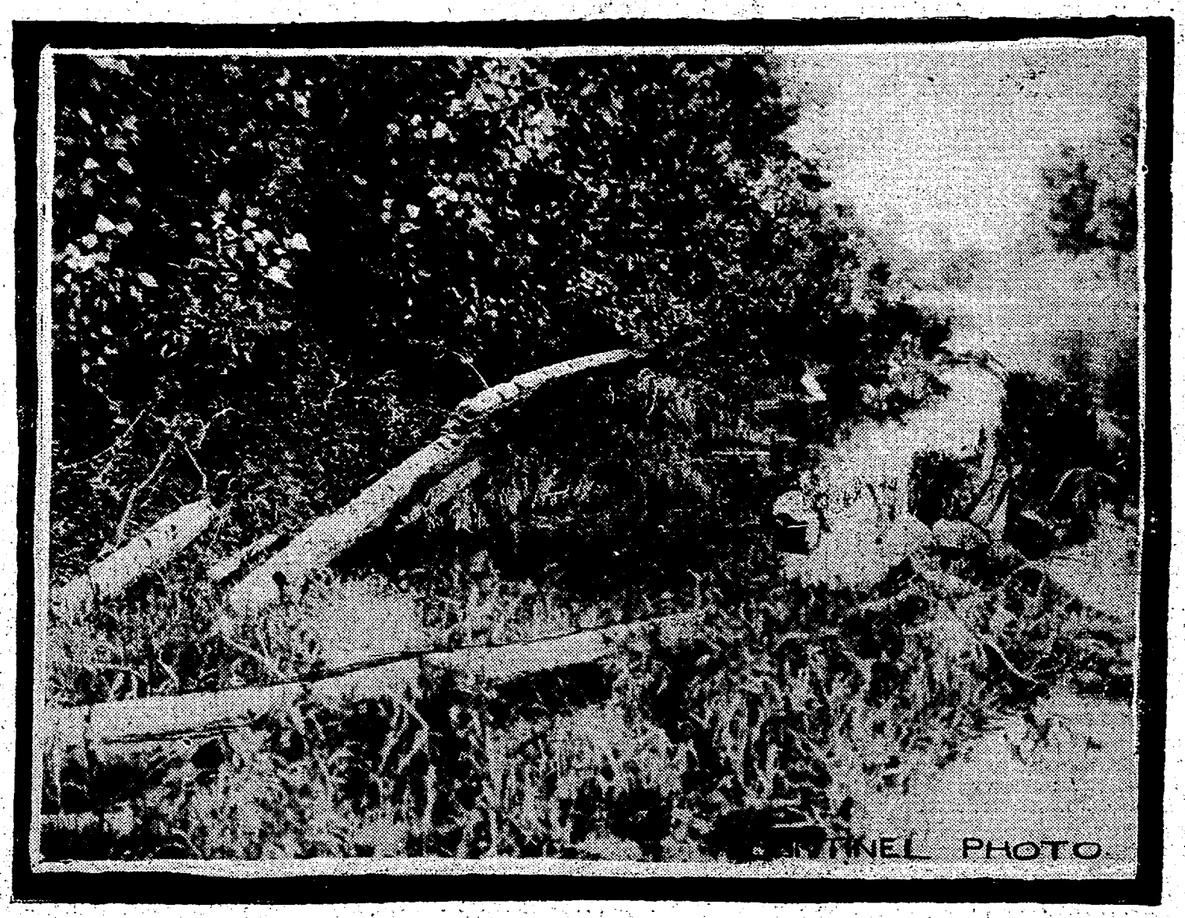






Old Canal Boat on River Bottom and Crumbling Locks Relics of Canal Days





Plans for the damming of the St. Joe or the Maumee river, to set a stage of water that would permit navigation on these streams, recalls to the mind of "the oldest inhabitant" the days when the St. Joe was a very busy stream, with boats plying up and down it from Fort Wayne to Cedarville and points north. There now remains but one trace of that inland marine traffic, the battered ribs and decaying hull of a canal boat deep in the mud along the bank of the river, above Robison park.

What the old boat was, who was its captain, what was its fate, why it was left stranded at a little known place deep in the country nobody knows. The farmers in the vicinity state that the old boat was there when they first remember the river and there are very few who know that it exists. It is visable only in low water, for it has sunk deep into the mud, and only the tips of the ribs and a few pieces of planking remain above the surface.

However, the outline is very plainly seen from a canoe or small boat, while the shrubbery along the bank obscures any possible view of it from the shore.

Therefore the last trace of the navigable St. Joe has remained long hidden less than ten miles from the heart of the city. The right hand pictures show the boat as it appears in low water, the ends of the ribs protruding probably three inches above the water, and only an outline of planking visable.

A number of years ago one of the other traces of the shipping vanished when the old canal boat cabin that for years stood near Columbia street and the Nickel Plate railroad was torn down. This old cabin had been taken from one of the packet boats, and had run the gamut from bachelor apartments to fish market. It remained there for years just off the street, and when it was torn down many persons believed that the shipping on the canal had become a mere memory here.

The old boat up the St. Joe was unknown or rather forgotten then, and had it not been for the inauguration of canoing at Robison park no one today would know it existed. However, the canoists in their explorations came across it, and the above photographs resulted.

The canal has been history nearly fifty years. But here and there across Indiana and Ohio one finds crumbling traces of the earthwork and masonry, all that remains of that once tremendous aid to the building of Indiana's greatness.

Washington Father of Idea.

It was George Washington who first formulated the idea of the Wabash and Erie canal. General Washington, himself an expert engineer, conceived the idea of cutting a trough between the then little known great lakes and the great river of the far west. But it was many years afterward that the definite plans were made for work on the canal.

Seated in a summer house in the grounds of the old Hanna estate, at Fort Wayne, a number of prominent citizens [illegible] evening [illegible] wealthy and influential citizens, and in June, 1826, they managed to pry loose enough money from the government coffers to get a preliminary survey. This was completed two years later, after a number of engineers had died of malaria in the Indiana swamps.

It was in 1832 that Jesse L. Williams was appointed chief engineer, and with nothing but the rough preliminary line to work from, he and a corps of assistants began the actual digging of the canal. Government grants and land sales had brought into the Indiana state treasury enough money to commence the work, and income from other sources was coming in slowly but surely, for this, the first great public improvement sanctioned by and partially financed by the government of the United States.

The breaking of ground for the Wabash and Erie canal, at Fort Wayne, on Washington's birthday, 1832, was one of the half dozen truly important events in the history of Fort Wayne. The Cass county Times of the next week tells an often repeated story, that is as graphic a description of the day as is to be found in any of the few remaining documents on the subject.

J. Vigus, Esq., according to the Times, was authorized to procure the necessary tools, get what assistance was necessary, and to "repair to a point on the St. Joseph's feeder line at two o'clock on that day for the purpose named." Judge Hanna, Robert John and many other prominent citizens set about to get a crowd out for the celebration, and a public meeting was called in the Masonic hall. All citizens of prominence not only in Fort Wayne but in the Maumee and Wabash valleys were invited, and practically all of them attended. Henry Rudisill was chairman and David H. Colerick was made secretary. Following the meeting at the hall, a procession was formed and the commissioners fell into the lead. The several hundred who made up the party walked to the place selected, across the St. Mary's river.

The Hon. Charles W. Ewing delivered an address and Commissioner Vigus talked for a few minutes on the difficulties that had been overcome already in the preliminary work, took a spade in his hand, and saying, "I am now ready to commence the Wabash and Erie canal, in the name and by the authority of the state of Indiana," he [illegible] shouting and cheering, marched back into town.

Then came a long grind of terrible struggle. Indiana in those days was a swamp, undrained, uncut, and steeped in malaria. Contracts were let for strips of the work, and wokmen were imported. That was a great time in the history of the little frontier town. Irish and Germans were shipped in, and a clan spirit that grew with the population found its way to nightly fights and frolics.

Malaria was everywhere. Quinine was quoted as a staple by merchants and traders all along the route. Undertakers appeared and became prosperous. Men worked in the swamps and lived in hovels on the way, and fought out their nights and died. It was a terrible work, that of digging the old canal, and one that never would have been completed had the men behind the scheme been of the too cautious variety now so much in evidnece.

So it was after a man-sized struggle that on July fourth 1843, the canal boat, Indiana, pulled through the final locks and passed down the river to Huntington.

Fort Wayne that day was the scene of a celebration that was the first of its kind in Indiana. True, loyal, public-spirited, everybody joined in making merry, for the canal, that dream of a generation and that labor of years, was completed—a reality.

The demonstration took place in Thomas Swinney's grove, according to information left in papers and letters of the day, and of course that grove now is Swinney park. People came for hundreds of miles, there were prominent citizens of Toledo, Detroit and Cincinnati, while a number made that dangerous and tiresome journey from Cleveland, O.

Peter Kiser, at that time one of the solid citizens, and ever since remembered for his store, his patriotism and his scrap book, in an abundance of enthusiasm drove a fat ox from the West prairie, across 145 miles of Indiana swamps. He was able to make only ten miles a day, but arrived in time for the barbecue. General Lewis Cass, of the New York state Erie canal was the principal orator of the day and Judge Hanna, J. L. Williams, Henry Rudisill, C. W. Ewing and a score of other well known citizens were on the program.

[illegible] the boats came into the feeder canal from the main line and went the length of it pulled by horses on the tow path, and then passed into the river. They were poled up the stream to the Cedarville landing, which was one of the busiest places in Indiana in those days, lumber and bark being piled up in great heaps there at all times awaiting for shipment.

It was one of these boats that went down, and that remains today on the river bottom.

Of the canal itself, little is left. The feeder, dry and weed-grown, follows the park car line, and east and west of the city the bed of the old ditch still is plainly visible. However, the locks for the most part have been torn down, and in only one place in the immediate vicinity are they to be seen. In the east end of the city, between Glasgow and Walton avenues, along the Nickel Plate, the masonry pictured above remains as a monument of days long gone by, and down a little further, below the Bueter farm on the Lincoln highway, decayed docks are dropping into the old bed.

Here the oldest highway and the newest run parallel for several miles, the linking of two eras, the canal age and the day of the motor car.

Miss Louise McGavick and "Dolled Up" Princess Ena.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 28.—Time was when men folks thought they knew all there was to know about the care of cows. That was before the days of cosmetics in cow culture. Men now admit they know how to feed cows, herd 'em, furnish them with bovine palaces.

But when it comes to making a cow look fit for exhibition—to doll up an animal so that it can take its rightful place in polite society—college and her title has been officially confirmed by the college's own bulletin. She received the title through having taken Princess Ena, a fine, registered Ayreshire cow from a herd, and making her the finest appearing bossy on the college farm, and the most valuable one, too. She won the prize at the annual show.

"How'd you ever do it," Miss Louise was asked, "if it isn't a professional secret?"

"Of course," she said, "you feed the cow just right, and in addition to currying and brushing, you rub, wash, shampoo, massage and use the vibrator on bossy.

"You oil the hoofs and clip off all refractory hairs. The hair between the horns and on the face is made very [illegible] and just so many hairs [illegible]

The college bulletin comments:

Battles Between Players and Umpires Still Arise Occasionally, But This Season Has Shown That the Ball Tosser Is More Considerate Of "His Umps" Than In Former Years —Queer Accidents Sometimes Lead to Wrong Decisions

UMPIRE BOB WALLACE

TOMMY LEACH

A wild-eyed player, rises from the dust around second base, brushing his trousers as he makes a rush at the blue clad official whose backward jerked thumb has ruled against him on a close play.

The manager trots out from the dugout.

The coachers come from their places at first and third.

The opposing players toss the ball around and adopt that, "We should worry" air which is so exasperating to the home crowd.

The fans yell in derision.

For a time it appears that the European war is going to break all over again in the center of that diamond. Then the arbiter backs slowly away, the grumbling players resume their stations, the man who was called out makes a conversational way to the bench, and the storm is over.

It's a merry life for the "umps."

The wonder is that he so often is right, not that he does not "see 'em." Players, say some of the best umpires in the business, are usually fair, much more so than the crowds themselves. Rowdyism has died out of the game to a large extent.

Umpire Rigler and "Buck" Herzog, manager of the Cincinnati team, "mixed" in a game early in the season. Rigler struck Herzog over the face with his mask. And yet, the chances are good that nothing would have happened had it not been for a bad habit of Umpire Hart which caused the entire rumpus.

LEARING A LESSON.

Mal Eason, in discussing the trials and tribulations of umpires not long ago, remarked that he once learned a lesson which he would never forget.

"I never turn my back on a play until the ball is back in the pitcher's hands," declared the National league arbiter. "There are so many things that can happen."

But that is just what Hart did in the game which resulted in the Rigler-Herzog clash.

Leach had reached second safely and Huggins had taken the ball from the outfield. Leach was safe by miles and there was no chance that Hart would have a decision to make. The umpire was facing the play when Leach went into the bag. As Leach arose, Hart turned his back and walked to a place behind the pitcher. He did not wait to see whether Huggins had thrown the ball in.

The result was that Huggins pulled the hidden ball trick while the field umpire's back was turned. Naturally, as Hart did not see the play, he could not rule on it. Huggins appealed to Rigler, who called Leach out. Herzog insisted that it was Hart's duty to rule on the play and that Rigler could not see it from behind the plate.

There were, of course some elements of justice in the position taken by Herzog. But the funny thing of it—and the funny thing that the fans so often fail to see—is that Rigler was right. Leach was caught off the bag by a good foot. Only, Hart, who should have made the decision did not see it.

RELATIONS. PECULIAR

Ball players and their relations to the umpire are funny. Not long ago an American league umpire made a close decision on a play which made the playing manager of one team look like a mutt in front of his players.

The manager, who is one of the best fellows in the game is far from being an umpire baiter, put up an awful yell. He came near being banished from the game.

"Why, you poor boob," said the umps, "ask any of your own players. They'll tell you that you were out by a mile."

The manager did. And the next inning, as he took the field, he muttered to the "umps" in a shame-shame-faced sort of way, "I'm sorry I said what I did. I guess he had me, all right."

That incident is an example of the fairness of most ball players toward the umpires.

"I don't mind the guys that come in and tell their managers the truth," said Billy Evans one day. "It's the chaps that insist, even on the bench, that they got the worst of a decision who get my goat.

"The crowds are pretty raw on the boys when they get caught off first, or happen to make some boob play that looks bad even if it is close.

FAIRNESS OF PLAYERS.

"The player's only alibi is to register a good healthy kick. If he is a regular guy he will come into the bench and inform his boss that he was out. But if he isn't he will continue that holler all afternoon on the bench. The result is that every player on the team believes his side has been given the worst of it and they yelp on all the close ones until the last man is out."

As an instance of how often the player is wrong, the fans are wrong and the umpire is right there occurred a play in the Federal league this year which caused the manager of one team to be ousted, almost suspended, sent one player to the club house and made the life of Umpire Westervelt a nightmare whenever he appeared in that town for weeks afterwards.

It was a close game. There was a runner on first and the batter drove one down to second. The shortstop had been playing over near third and when the ball was hit he came on the dead run to take the throw at second and complete a double play.

The short stop had his speed guaged to a nicety. He expected the second baseman to throw at once. That would have put him on the bag as he received the ball and he would be able to throw to first without stopping.

But for some reason, probably because he wanted to wait until the shortstop got nearer the base, the second baseman did not throw at once. The result was the shortstop could not check himself. His momentum carried him over the bag as he received the ball. He made the throw to first and got his man there, but Westervelt called the runner at second safe. To every fan in the park and to a majority of the players, the play was so quick and it seemed so certain that the shortstop had gotten the ball as he stepped on the bag, that everyone thought the decision was "rotten."

But the shortstop later acknowledged that he was carried over the the bag and was not on it when he got the throw. The truth is that the play was decided unusually well.

AS IT SHOULD BE.

There's another funny thing about umpires that I doubt if one fan in a hundred knows. Probably there are many readers of this story who believe that an umpire calls a close one at first as he sees it. He never does. He calls it as he hears it.

Mal Eason told me this. He says that he always calls a first base play as the sound of the foot striking the bag comes with the thump of the ball striking the glove. The sounds are entirely different. If the foot sound comes first the runner is safe and vice versa.

"It would be more than impossible," says Eason, "it would be pure guesswork to catch a play at first by eyesight. It is different with a runner going into second or third. There you are almost on top of the play and can follow the course of the ball and the foot with your eye. You can't do it with a runner coming into first standing up."

These are but a few incidents of the peculiar relations between the umpire and the ball player and the fans. Verily, it's a life.

RED SMYTH BREAKS INTO GAME AGAIN

Red Smyth got into the Brooklyn affair Friday, being sent in in the fifth to run for Pitcher Dell. There were two outs when he went in and he had no chance to do a thing, as a pop-up closed the inning.

Freddie Bratchi is a regular member of the Columbus American association team and is the clean-up man for the trailing Ohioans. In yesterday's game he hit in one run, made five catches in his position in center field, and one error. He is credited with a throw to first from center, catching a base runner a foot off the bag.

Steil, of Grand Rapids, and Sykes, of Dayton, both are in the regular Columbus line-up, but neither of them has played such spectacular ball as Bratchi has ladled out in the past few days.

Holderman has not broken into the Milwaukee line-up yet, although he probably will go there within a few days.

FULLBACK GETS MORE PROTECTION

However, Football Rule Changes Are Slight This Season.

Special pains have been taken by the men who rejiggered the football rules for the coming season, to provide the fullback with more protection than he has ever had before and that means the fullback is going to be used more in carrying the ball.

The rules, just issued, show that in regard to the fullback, distinction is made between "running into" the player and "roughing" him. The player who "runs into" the fullback will cause his team to be penalized 15 yards, while "roughing" the fullback will not only bring the 15-yard penalty, but cause the offending player to be disqualified.

There is always the temptation to manhandle the man carrying the ball. The more the fullback is bumped the more penalties and disqualifications the other side will suffer, so coaches will see that the fullback is often in position to be bumped.

Other changes are slight. The committee decided the game could not be improved much. The flocking of substitutes onto the field in the last period is prohibited by a rule which says resubstitutions will not be allowed except at the beginning of a period.

The Center, in passing the ball, will have to let it out of his hands after his motion is started. That will prevent delayed plays in which the center held the ball, until a player could come up and take it.

The numbering of players for the benefit of spectators is recommended.

CUPID TAGS OUT BALL PLAYER

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 28.—Frank Guigni, third baseman for the Seattle Northwestern baseball club, and formerly with the Spokane Indians, was purchased by the Benedicts recently for a life contract. He signed up with the married men's club when he led Miss Mayme Laws, popular Spokane girl, to the altar.

Guigni was fanned by Cupid a few months ago, when his leg was broken at the opening of the season. The little god knocked a home run and the ball player had no chance when he met Miss Laws. He made a hit with her and she doubled at their first meeting.

Guigni is a former Stanford and Santa Clara university ball player and will return to California at the end of the season to enter business, he says.

CAN A "DARK HORSE" WIN GOLF TITLE OR WILL IT BE ONE OF BIG THREE AGAIN?

BY BROWN HOLMES.

The national amateur golf championship tournament at Detroit, Mich., attracted 138 entrants and golf fans are wondering if there is, somewhere in that army of club swingers, some man who can rise up in his might and take the big play from the chaps who are always in the limelight.

Three players stand out most prominently—Jerry Travers, Francis Ouimet and Chick Evans. They have won so many tournaments it has become monotonous.

These three have the old game worked down to such a science and have so much "form," which is a powerful factor, that whenever they go into a meet the question of who will win lacks punch and interest centers around the runner-up possibilities.

There may be, though, some "dark horse" in that lot who will knock old form and older science galley west and by sheer pluck or sheer luck bat tradition into the discard.

If it does happen that Travers and Evans get into the final round, the big stake will be at the mercy of two players who are opposites and extremes in golfing temperament.

Travers, just ordinary at medal play, is a wonder against a personal opponent. Evans, a star at medal play, may be wonderfully efficient or wierdly incapable against a personal opponent. In match play Evans seems to act as the spirit moves him; Travers is at his best under pressure.

It has happened that a "dark horse" has won in a big meet. Ouimet was known little better than some of the caddies when he beat Vardon and Ray, the English professionals, for the open championship. There may be a dark one in this combat.

BELIEVE MEN ARE GUILTY OF THEFT

Yegg Sent Up from Here and His Pal Held by the Police.

Two men who give the names of George Doyle and Ben Goodey, of Philadelphia, are held under $500 bond each by the police, who believe the men may be guilty of the theft of a traveling bag from the Nickel Plate depot here on August 10. The bag was the property of H. E. Adams, a traveling salesman who resides at 115 East Suttenfield street and it contained a large quantity of valuable samples of pocket knives, razors and the like. The robbery was reported to the police at once, but no clue was obtained until Friday afternoon when Abe Franklin reported to headquarters that two men had appeared at his Calhoun street store and sold to him for $5 something like 100 pocket knives having a value of from 25 cents to $1.25 each. Chief Lenz put his detectives at work to find the men. Detective Sergeants Immel and Brennan saw Goodey and Doyle on Harrison street, where they were splitting up the money that they had got for the cutlery. The two men saw the officers and Franklin approaching in an automobile and stepped into a cafe, where they were arrested. Doyle was promptly identified as Theodore McDonald, alias John Myers, alias Fred Funk, of Toledo, who had been sent up from here in 1910 for burglary on Hanna street. The identification was made complete by photographs and records produced by Detective Brennan, who is in charge of the Bertillon room at headquarters. The pair were arraigned in the city court Saturday morning on loitering charges, continued to September 4 and put under $500 bond. Later they were questioned by Chief Lenz. They assert that they purchased the cutlery that they had sold to Franklin.

Other City Court Cases.

Eli Dimitroff, charged with associating with prostitutes, and Henrietta Anderson, charged with prostitution, were not present in court when their cases were called, but Judge Kerr dismissed them on motion of Prosecuting Attorney Callahan. The pair were caught in a raid some months ago and a short time later were married. They have failed repeatedly to appear.

An indefinite continuance was given in the case of Roscoe D. Edwards, against whom an affidavit was filed for failing to have proper license tags on his auto.

Walter Fouke, a loiterer held for several days, was turned loose to leave the city.

The case against William Gerkin, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed on motion of the prosecutor.

John Colvin, who was May Waltemath's companion at the home of Harry Mennewisch, when the police raided that place at 304½ East Columbia street, early Sunday morning and put up forfeit bond, was fined $25 and costs and given a suspended sentence of fifteen days in jail upon a plea of guilty entered for him by Chief of Police Lenz.

Three cases against citizens who had failed to cut their weeds were continued indefinitely, it having been shown that they had complied with the ordinance since the affidavits were filed.

NO TRACE OF ROBBERY.

Police investigation at the office of the Standard Oil company at the junction of the Nickel Plate and Grand Rapids & Indiana railroads failed to reveal any traces of robbery. A broken window pane and bloody finger prints had raised the suspicion that the place had been entered for loot as it frequently has been.

DYING IN MUNCIE.

Chief of Police Lenz on Saturday morning received a telephone message from the chief of police at Muncie stating that Louis Mast, of 111 West Columbia street, Fort Wayne, was dying of heart disease in that city. The local department notified the Muncie chief of the address of a sister of the dying man in Lafayette.

CORRESPONDENT PAYNE SPENDS WHOLE WEEK IN BUSINESS MEN'S TRAINING CAMP AND WATCHES GEN. WOOD PUT THEM THROUGH THE PACES—THEY ARE SURE FINDING OUT SOMETHING ABOUT A SOLDIER'S JOB.

(By Kenneth W. Payne.)

There was a sound of reveille at dawn,
And Morgan's capital had gathered there
Our highbrows and our chivalry, and wan,
--Odebefore Waterloo, Plattsburg edition.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(First absolutely uncensored dispatch from millionaires' war zone)—Surrounded by ancient graveyards and military ruins, there lie on the historic banks of Lake Champlain a new graveyard and many new military ruins!

It is the graveyard of a thousand names—the very famous names of America's foremost families!

The famous names now buried here include such as Roosevelt, Hamilton Fish, Elihu Root, Van Rensselaer, Belmont, Carnegie, Robert Bacon, etc., etc. In their place are only nondescript, stiff, weary, creaking corpses in khaki, going endlessly from morn to night through drills and countermarches, assemblies and retreats. This is no pink tea affair, but war in grim earnest, with Major General Leonard Wood looking on in joy, and an aggregation of uncompromising United States army officers driving these aristocratic rookies through as much drill in a day (literally) as the seasoned regulars get in a week!

Take for instance what was once Robert Bacon, American ambassador to France. When last seen, just before taps, it was lying exhausted, its head in a mud puddle, oblivious to all but the fact that the first week was hardly up, and three more were to follow!

Or, there is the peripatetic unbathed body of a certain Mitchel who only recently was mayor of the city of New York, but now is just a numbered private in the first rank of Company A. Mitchel has been trying for a solid week to snatch a moment's freedom for a swim in Lake Champlain. But Captain Kelly, of Company A, is the master slave driver of all the encampment, and Mitchel's aquatic yearnings are still unsatisfied.

And then there is the meekest, most orderly orderly in the camp. It used to be Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. And here we come to the second tragedy mentioned at the start of this article, namely, the new military ruins—ruins of ancient soldierly methods. The traditional military salute, for instance, is no more! In its place has come an evolution wholly new in army tactics. It is the Roosevelt wriggle—the junior T. R.'s own and original contention. Approaching his captain, he brings his hand to his head, makes modified obeisance with the latter, and then indulges, still tongue-tied, in an embarrassed wriggle, beginning at the nape of the neck and rippling downward to his hips. When this has been acknowledged, he makes free to speak.

The lamp—the good old-fashioned kerosene lamp—is, next to the salute, the most mysterious thing in camp to these thousand aristocrats reduced to rookery. When I asked Captain Halsted Dorey, in command of camp, whether there would be rifle practice soon, he explained, "Why, they don't even know which is the business end of the gun yet," and then he immediately retracted. "As a matter of fact, most of them are big game hunters and handle a rifle better than I do."

The regiment has not gone into offensive military action since the famous bayonet charge of the Wall street brigade, which I was lucky enough to witness the day when equipment was distributed. In single file, their arms laden with bacon tins, canteens, mattresses, cartridge belts, tin cups and plates and forks, and with their bayonet-pointed guns projecting before them, their eyes looking backward to see how many things they were dropping, these millionaire militants advanced upon the unsuspecting regulars who were bossing other parts of the camp, and many were the stabs in the back administered, and thunderous the detonation of exhortatives which followed.

Reveille yanks them towsled, sleepy-eyed and unshaven out of their tents at 5:45 a. m. They are forced through fifteen minutes' stiff calisthenics before breakfast. Then they march, the stragglers racing half-clad to catch up, to the so-called mess tents, which seem more like enlarged bake-ovens, under the broiling sun. These men, accustomed to $2 lunches at Delmonico's are stomaching bologna and French-fried on an allowance of fifty cents a day!

After breakfast continue the weary succession of company drills, marches and Swedish gymnastics, all day long. A sardonic regulation permits the citizen-soldiery to wear civilian clothes and go to dances at neighboring hotels, on certain evenings! Why, at night it's all they can do to crawl out of their khaki, much less don civilian garments. And as for dancing—! The glimpse of a bespectacled college professor, a retired Wall street banker and an unshorn lawyer of note, all in olive-drab limply perched on stools at the drug-store up town, imbibing ice cream sodas is, however, not uncommon in the evening.

The men are now signing up for special instruction. Cavalry and field artillery they choose by preference. There is a strange lack of interest in "field fortification"—which seems less strange when one remembers that that includes trench digging.

"But they aren't going to escape the trenches," said Captain Dorey. "Every man jack in the regiment has got to leave shovel in hand to dig himself in."

OBSERVANCE OF LABOR DAY URGED

Indianapolis, Aug. 28.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston has issued the following Labor day proclamation:

"The statute of Indiana designates the first Monday in September as Labor day and emphasizes its importance by making it a legal holiday. This is not done because there is a fixed laboring class in this country. There is no such class here. The man who labors with his hands today may tomorrow, through his inguinity, direct the commercial interest of his community or state. And the man who directs today the commercial interest of his community or state may tomorrow occupy the position of day laborer; and this is as it should be in a free country, where every man's standing is, broadly speaking, fixed by his own industry and merit, or the lack thereof.

"The public is glad to recognize the worth to society of those who work and to honor them for the strength and stability they afford the state and nation. Without labor there would not be a home in which to shelter wife and children—there would not be a cathedral in which to worship God and weave stronger the bonds of brotherly love. Labor should not, therefore, be looked upon as a misfortune, but as a blessing. When justice prevails between it and capital, society enjoys prosperity and contentment, and out of these come love and laughter.

"Labor is an unmixed blessing when it is accompanied by the virtues of frugality, thrift and honesty. On these manhood is builded, and those enjoying a manhood builded out of labor should not overburden it through the lack of frugality. One supporting himself and those dependent upon him either by labor or by other means, should not overlook the fact that 'frugality is founded on the principle that all riches have limits,' whether accumulated through labor or otherwise.

"Frugality then has a moral as well as an economic value; and this fact, coupled with the duty of government toward and the indebtedness of society to labor, should not be overlooked by those who will discuss on the day set apart in honor of labor the things that make for its welfare.

"In recognition of these truths, I, Samuel M. Ralston, as governor of the state of Indiana, do designate and proclaim Monday, the sixth day of September, 1915, as Labor day and on this day I direct that all offices, state and municipal, be closed; and I urge all the people of Indiana, in so far as it is practicable for them to do so, to observe this day as a public holiday in honor of labor, by closing their places of business and by turning from their usual avocations for the day, or by otherwise giving fitting expression of their appreciation of labor."

By Floyd King.

Fifty years ago a red-headed, freckled-face little lad was running around in Miami county, Indiana, and he was looking for work, not for play. His circumstances forced him to work, and from the first position he held in a livery stable, working for fifty cents a week, up to the present time, this lad has never taken a vacation.

At one time Ben Wallace only owned the cheap overalls and suspenders he wore. He did not inherit a dollar, has never had any pull except that of his own brain. At one time, he did not have money enough to buy feed for his pet canary bird. Today he owns one of the largest herds of elephants in the country and is operating one of the largest circus organizations in the world.

He is president of one of the largest banking institutions in Indiana, the Wabash Valley Trust company, at Peru. He owns one of the largest department stores in the state. He owns a theater and all sorts of land holdings in that city. But chief of Mr. Wallace's wealth is centered in land. He believes land is the safest and best place for money, and if he were young now, according to his statement, he would be a simple son of the soil. Raised on a farm, he has become Indiana's greatest farmer, owning and operating 3,500 acres of land that could not be bought for less than $350 per acre.

When the gorgeous street pageant of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus passes over the streets of Fort Wayne, Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6, the small and poor lads of the city may find encouragement in the thought that the owner of that magnificent display was once as poor as any boy, but that by following two rules, of honesty and unfailing work, he became a mighty captain of industry, his circuis interests, as large as they are, being comparatively a side issue with him.

Every well-posted farmer in the Eastern states knows of "Ben" Wallace, of Peru, Indiana, just as every little tot knows of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. Notwithstanding his wealth, Mr. Wallace was never too busy to extend every possible thought and care to his aged mother and never too proud to stoop to speak to the poor. Today when with his shows, he is sociable with every one of about 1,000 employees. Even many of the humble workmen he cals by their first name. He classes them among his friends, just as he does capitalists and noted persons numbered among his acquaintances.

He shuns the limelight and never likes to be pointed out as "Mr. Wallace." Frequently people out of curiosity may step up to him and ask if he is Mr. Wallace. He is almost sure to answer, "I am the boss hostler," however, not denying that he is Mr. Wallace.

Although this Hoosier showman could buy and own all the circuses in the world, he has never desired to own and operate but one complete organization, which never divides or splits. Early in life it was his ambition to build up "the highest class circus in the world" and since that was attained he has constantly maintained the high standard. When buying horses, he could buy cheap animals, but he insists on buying the best. When he buys a suit of clothes, this same idea is kept in mind. He prefers to have one good suit of clothes rather than two suits that aggregate the same price.

But it was when he bought outright the great Carl Hagenbeck's animal shows, a master hand was displayed in the amusement world and by the genuine combination of that unequaled animal show with his own three-ring circus, the redheaded lad of Peru, Ind., became a "circus king."

A big modern circus and menagerie probably embrace more different kinds of system and dicipline than any other business in which men engage for profit. It is a fact not generally known that the average number of circuses starting out each spring would foot up to the amazing total of 200. Where they go no one knows. They start out buoyantly enough, but somehow they never seem to get back. When one considers that this has been going on in America for the past 75 years, it is really remarkable that so few men have succeeded in the circus business. It seems pretty clear that a variety of genius not common is necessary to become a successful circus proprietor.

There are only three or four well-known circus enterprises today, and two of them "Hagenbeck" and "Wallace," are among the most prominent. The combination of the Wallace circus as made several years ago with the Hagenbeck animal aggregation, has developed a show different from the other circuses—the trained wild animals giving a feature both interesting and pleasing.

Sylvester Wikard, of State street, and Mrs. Sarah Knight, of Randolph street, have returned from Forest, O., where they attended the funeral of their uncle.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cave on, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and on a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets the business barons who are converted to her new gospel. She makes an impression on the society world. Tommy joins the labor ranks. Tommy plays Joseph to the wife of a modern Potiphar and is rescued from a lynching party by Celestia. She prevents a massacre of strikers, and settles the strike. Mrs. Gunsdorf and Mary Blackstone conspire. Stilliter, jealous, begins to use his hypnotic power treacherously. Barclay begins a campaign for the presidential nomination and Celestia spreads her propaganda of efficiency as Barclay's platform. Tommy opposes her and Mary Blackstone plots Celestia's death. The plot fails, and Mrs. Gunsdorf dies. Stilliter hypnotizes Celestia to join him, prepares for their marriage, and wires Barclay she has gone back to heaven. Tommy and Freddy the Ferret rescue her and take her, still under Stilliter's unholy spell, to the cave she knew as heaven. Stilliter attempts to murder Tommy and again flees with Celestia. Barclay abjures greed and lust of power and desires real greatness. Freddy rescues Celestia from Stilliter, who starts a forest fire and is drowned while trying to escape from it. Tommy finds the Ferret and Celestia and in the cave tells her her story. Back in New York she publicly accuses the triumvirate.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT

Gordon Barclay's servants had orders to admit no one without orders. The city was in a turmoil. With each fresh edition of the newspapers the situation of the conspirators became more serious. In the public parks effigies of them were hanged or burned. It became necessary to keep a cordon of police about Barclay's house. In Semmes' house and Sturtevant's no window remained whole. For twenty hours these two men had been Barclay's guests.

Gunsdorf's great hour had come—that hour for which he had plotted all his life, and lied for and schemed for. He had been the leading figure in the mob that had tried to lynch the triumvirate in the first burst of rage. And he found himself suddenly at the head of all the lawless elements in the city. He was drunk with power and a sense of his own importance. But openly he spoke of his love for mankind.

Through a man friendly to him and deep in Gunsdorf's councils, Tommy learned that the life of the man who had adopted him and been good to him was in danger. His house was to be stormed over the heads of the police, and himself hanged or torn to pieces, as might happen.

All their differences fled from Tommy's mind, and he remembered only their mutual affection; so he hurried to the old familiar house and was presently admitted.

"It's just to say a few words," said Tommy, and he told Barclay what Gunsdorf was planning for that very day.

"We'll go to Gull Island," Barclay said simply, "till this thing has blown over. I suppose you are not unhappy about what has happened. It's a pity she came back. . . . Tommy, when we quarreled I was ambitious for power only. Later I began to think that Celestia was a real panacea for a sick world. So that if I had been destined to rule, I would have ruled for the good of the people. I want you to know that what began in cynicism ended in faith and honesty. I have put you back in my will for practically everything I possess. Carlton Fitch has turned knave. Mary, if she marries him, will be worthy of him."

"You'll need somebody to keep house for you at Gull Island," said Tommy. He was too moved to refer to what he had just learned. "I'll get Celestia there as quickly as I can."

"Have you married her?"

Tommy looked very manly when he said that he had. And Barclay smiled one of his old-time dazzling smiles.

"And I think," he said finally, "that you had better get out of this house as quickly as you can. I'm going, too. I can't afford to be a hero."

They shook hands and parted, never to meet in this life again.

Late that night Tommy and Celestia and Freddie the Ferret, whom Tommy was trying to train to be his valet, caught the last boat for Bartell's, on Bartell's Island, from which Gull's Island may be reached in an hour in a fast launch. They had had no word of what had happened in New York.

Tommy, without arousing suspicion, could not find out if Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant had gone on ahead, or were following.

"If they are behind us," he said to Celestia, "they'll have to charter something. Perhaps father will come all the way by boat—that would be best. His own yacht would be spotted. But he'll work something."

Gull Island resembles a loaf of bread that has risen too much. A rounded, billowing top is set upon high, almost perpendicular sides.

In this island retreat, open and ready for the master the year round, the triumvirate, if only they could reach it, would be as safe from mob violence as on a ship at sea.

A steep climb, a wild expanse of star-lit moor, little ancient trees growing very close together, a strong perfume of bayberry bushes, of sweet fern and roses, and then the low-ceilinged, softly lighted hall, with many menservants, a cool, delightful night, soundly slept—these were Celestia's first impression of Gull Island.

In the morning she went with her husband to the eastern cliffs, and she had her first look at the ocean—sullenly tumbling, white-maned—under a gray and sullen sky.

* * * * * * *

Soon after Tommy's departure, and before the triumvirate could complete their arrangements for the retreat to Gull's Island, the streets contiguous to Gordon Barclay's house and the streets in the neighborhood began to fill with men and women who looked like the dregs of the city.

But it was immediately in front of the house that the crowd was thickest and most menacing.

There was no actual violence until Gunsdorf arrived. He, high above the crowd on an improvised rostrum, roared for blood and vengeance.

Weapons began to flash.

Then the police tried to disperse the mob, and, after hard fighting and the breaking of many heads, were overpowered, passed over and swept aside. Then the crowd began to swarm over the tall iron gates and the spiked iron fence.

There was a fountain—a bronze youth, arms akimbo, who with puffed cheeks blew a fine spray of water. Him certain stray violent men pried from his base, and used, swinging him by the feet and arms, to batter down the solid, heavy front door of the house.

This done, the leaders rushed in, and for a moment were halted by the uncompromising dignity and grandeur of the hall. Facing them was a flight of marble steps. At the top of these stood Gordon Barclay. When the crowd recognized him they yelled like a pack of wolves. The corners of his mouth twitched with a kind of glassy contempt. He turned slowly and passed through a doorway that was just behind him, slammed the door shut and locked it. Not till then did he show a sign of fear or haste. Now, however, he ran swiftly through the library, out at the other end, and down a back stair to the service courtyard. Here, headed for tall wooden gates in a tall brick wall over which wisteria was festooned, stood a powerful limousine car. The engine was purring. On the box sat two brave and handsome young men of the Barclay livery. In the body of the car sat Semmes and Sturtevant. Sturtevant looked furiously angry. Semmes looked seasick.

Meanwhile the bronze boy of the fountain came up the front stair, battered head first, and was used to ram down the door behind which Barclay had been seen to disappear.

The first man to enter the long, rich library was Gunsdorf. He gave only a glance at the open panel which disclosed the inviting interior of a safe, or at the greenbacks and yellowbacks of all denominations which the wily financier had scattered about the room, on tables, on chairs, on the floor—such things were for children.

Raging for his comrades to follow him, Gunsdorf rushed the length of the room, found the back stair down which Barclay had retreated, and came in less time than it takes to tell it to the service court at the back of the house.

But nobody followed Gunsdorf. The open safe, the scattered bills, stopped men as a solid cliff might have done. Vengeance was forgotten, and the crowd began to loot.

When Gunsdorf reached the courtyard the gates were half open. On strong steel brackets fixed to the back of the car were two spare rims, with inflated tires. These formed a resting place for Gunsdorf's feet and a grip for his hands. But the first forward leap of the car, followed by a hair-raising swerve to the left, almost threw him off.

Shots were fired. The car went over something soft that screamed, and that remained in the street after the car had passed and thwacked like a newly landed fish.

Gunsdorf stood upon the spare tires and clung to them and the lights of New York whirled by.

The scene of the riot was far behind. Up Fifth avenue the car raced. It was that hour before dark when the summer traffic was light, and the face of the great Gordon Barclay at the window of the car was enough to make even the boldest traffic cop think twice.

Through Central park, out Seventh avenue, across McComb's dam bridge, up Jerome avenue, through Fordham to the Pelham parkway, into New Rochelle and out, through Mamaroneck, Rye, Portchester, the car flew. And like grim death, his purpose never swerving, Gunsdorf clung to the spare tires. His feat was worthy of a better. Vengeance is no man's. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord."

The old fishing town of Giddings was dark as sin. The financiers, conferring, had determined to make this, rather than Missaquid, their point of departure. They would be to late to catch the last boat for Bartell's. Giddings, with Missaquid, formed the base of a triangle, of which Gull Island was the apex. Therefore, if they could here charter some craft to convey them to the island, there would be a great saving of time.

The car ran half way through the little town, turned a right angle and descended to the wharves, and here, in the darkness, stopped. Gunsdorf was the first to alight. He slipped into the shelter of a shed that smelled of fish and flung himself to the ground.

Why didn't he shoot down the financiers as they alighted from the car? His hands were so cramped from gripping the tires he could not have held or pointed a gun; they were shaking like leaves of poplar trees in a wind. He was in acute physical pain.

But, lying on the ground, writhing with exhaustion, he began to recover little by little from the ordeal through which he had passed, and he was able to keep an eye on the car and on the shadowy men whom he hated, and to listen to what they had to say to each other and to the fisherman whom they routed from his bed, and who finally, for a prodigious sum of money, consented to venture out in the easterly storm that was brewing and carry them and their luggage to Gull Island.

The name of his little schooner was the Mary Nye. She was at the end of the long wharf, half unloadcd. No, he had given up fishing. There was more money in coasting. They could start at once; he would have to get his crew together—two men and a boy. Had they really come all the way from New York? They must be hard set. Better come to the house. He'd rout the misses out of bed, and she'd give them coffee.

Barclay gave some orders to his driver, and much money; also he gave much money to the other man on the box, and he shook hands with them both and thanked them for their devotion to them, and told them that their future would be his care.

Then the car went one way, and the financiers and the fishermen went another, and presently Gunsdorf doubled half over, like a man crippled with rheumatism, rose from his hiding place, and hobbled off in a third.

The Mary Nye lay in the lee of the long wharf near the end. She was a dirty little ship. Amidship was a hold, formerly used as a container for codfish; it still smelled of them. The hatchway giving access to this hold was open, and into it Gunsdorf descended. It seemed to him, after exploring the schooner from stern to stem, to offer the best means of concealment. The little cabin aft was cleaner. It would be the choice of the triumvirate for their own quarters.

Gunsdorf was half crazy with fatigue. In a far corner of the hold he found a pile of sacking and flung himself down on them. But there was something hard among them that hurt him. He groped for this, and found that it was a powerful two-handed augur, fixed with an inch and a half bit.

He pushed it to one side and in a moment was sound asleep.

* * * * * * *

Barclay was restless; the cabin was stuffy and verminous; he preferred the deck and the open air. So it happened that in passing the main hatch, in a lull of the wind, he heard a sound of a man snoring. He had left Semmes and Sturtevant complaining of the discomforts of the cabin. Captain Nye was at the wheel, the two men and the boy forward.

He strolled aft.

"There's someone asleep in the main hold," he said.

"The hell there is!"

"You can hear him snoring if you listen in the hatchway."

"Well, let him snore."

Gradually it dawned upon Barclay that the presence on the schooner of a man unknown and unvouched for was not pleasant. So he descended into the hold, struck a match, and had a look at the sleeper's face.

Then very softly he returned to the deck, half closed the hatch, and, thrusting his head through the opening that remained, he called loudly: "Wake up, there!"

The snores ceased and were followed by a kind of sleepy groaning.

"Gunsdorf," called Barclay in a sharp, incisive voice, "can you hear me?"

"I hear you."

"What are you doing on this boat?"

No answer.

"Well, you'll not be able to do any mischief. You seem to like it down there. I am going to close this hatch so that you can't open it. You will not get out until the boat is back of her starting point. The captain is a safe man. You will not find out from him where I have been set ashore. So good-night to you."

Gunsdorf's answer was to fire two wild shots from his automatic. Barclay slammed the hatch to and succeeded in fastening it so that it could not be opened from below.

Then he went once more to the captain and talked to him for some time in an undertone. After that he waked Sturtevant and Semmes to tell them what had happened.

"He's been insane for some time," said Sturtevant. "He wouldn't stop at anything. I hope to God he hasn't got a stick of dynamite with him. He'd think nothing of blowing himself to pieces if we went, too."

Gunsdorf had no stick of dynamite. He had only an automatic with a few cartridges in the magazine, and an insane, murderous rage and hatred in his breast.

So they'd land somewhere, would they? He'd be carried back to the starting point, would he? Not if he knew it. His ride on the back of the automobile was all in vain, was it? He'd show 'em—damn em!

And his hands, their strength refreshed by hatred, insanity and suicidal daring, sought and found the big auger and began to bore a hole through the bottom of the schooner. He would drown, but so would they!

After a time the edge of the hole he was boring became damp, water began to trickle from the bit, then to spit and hiss, then the bit went clear through, and when he had withdrawn it water spouted upward as from a garden hose.

Gunsdorf laughed aloud, and at once began to bore a second hole. When he had nearly finished a third the bit broke short off, and Gunsdorf cursed. But the Mary Nye was taking in a good deal of water, and the failure of the bit only seemed to have postponed the time when the sea should close over her.

But in the book of fate the Mary Nye was not destined to perish by water alone. Among her heterogeneous coastwise cargo which had not been unloaded, from the small hold back of the main hold, were two sacks of unslaked lime. After a time a trickle of water found its way to these, and they began to smoke.

The first person to be aware of the smoke was Gunsdorf. It filtered into the main hold before it found its way to the deck. Gunsdorf at the moment, with a kind of diabolical eagerness, was trying to calculate the rapidity with which the water was rising. This was a difficult matter, owing to the motion of the vessel.

When he smelled the smoke his heart almost stopped beating, he was frightened. Water and dynamite had no terror for him, but death by fire had always been his nightmare. He was like a man waking after a great drunkenness, during which, let us say, he has committed some crime which his frenzied brain at the time of its commission had seemed a reasonable and even a meritorious thing to do, but the memory of which makes the same brain, the fumes of alcohol gone, a prey to the most awful terror and remorse.

In short, the man had recovered from his murderous and suicidal madness. He was sane—a rational creature, who realized what he had done, and that the deed was in vain, and that he alone would be destroyed by it.

What madness to suppose that such a man as Barclay would stay by the Mary Nye till she went down? She carried a boat for just such an emergency. But he, Gunsdorf, while the others rowed merrily off, would be left in the dark.

In the first moment of reasoning it did not occur to him that the ship was on fire. Rather he thought that the smoke was some devilish device of the triumvirate to asphyxiate him.

* * * * * * *

From the eastern cliffs, which received the onslaught of the open sea, Tommy and Celestia walked to those lower western cliffs whose feet are washed by the less strenuous waters which flow between Gull Island and the mainland, and here, sheltered from the wind, they seated themselves, ostensibly to admire the view, but really to admire each other.

The view consisted of gray water, a vast expanse of it, in commotion, and of a vast expanse of small gray sky; and, many miles distant, a small schooner beating slowly up to the island.

"They must be cooking a bonny breakfast," said Tommy, "judging from the smoke."

"By George you are right!" said Tommy. Then, a moment later, with excitement: "She's on fire. That's why the davits are swung outboard. They are waiting till the last moment to lower a boat. Thank the Lord they've got one! I suppose they want to get into the lee of the island. It must be pretty rough out there for a skiff. They're not making much headway, though. She looks very low in the water. Probably leaks like a sieve, and the fire keeps them from getting to the pumps."

"Can't we do anything to help?"

"Not unless the launch has come back from Bartells. She went over early for newspapers and supplies. Let's go see."

So they raced off to the landing. The launch had not yet returned, and there was neither sight nor sound of her. A catboat without even a mast was drawn up on ways, and the only other craft at the landing was a flat-bottomed skiff, so low in the water that she could not have lived in the rough water outside of the harbor.

"We can't do any good," said Tommy with a great deal of regret in his voice. Let's hurry back and see the end of it."

They stopped at the house for field glasses, of which there were several pairs in a drawer of the hall table, and hurried back to the western cliffs.

In his explorations of the night before Gunsdorf had noted the sacks of lime raised from the floor of the hold to keep them from any chance water. And it dawned upon him it was his own fault that they had got wet, and generated enough heat to set the ship on fire.

Captain Nye had kept his courage up, and held grimly to the task of trying to make head against the fire and against the water rising in the hold.

Through what remained of the night, and through all the long, anxious morning, he and his two men, aided by Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant, had fought like heroes against the fire and water.

It was discouraging to have to cart into the burning after-hold so much of the water that they blistered their hands pumping it out of it. At one time it looked as if they were going to get the fire under control. In that event they could have kept the vessel afloat indefinitely.

Captain Nye had suggested bringing Gunsdorf on deck and putting him to work, and the effort had been made. The man was disarmed as he came up, wet to the knees and choking with smoke. But at the sight of Barclay all his hate returned. He would not work; they couldn't make him.

"Why the hell should I," said he, "when I took the trouble to bore the holes that are sinking her and to start the fire that's burning her?"

All regarded the man with a horror that was akin to awe. Anger succeeded this.

"Is that the truth?" asked Captain Nye?"

"Yes."

Captain Nye motioned to his two men. They seized Gunsdorf, and after a short struggle cast him back into his prison and battened down the hatch.

"There's no room for him in the small boat," said Captain Nye; "and there's no more mischief he can do down below."

It was only the fatigue of those who were trying to save her that eventually settled the fate of the Mary Nye. Her captain called the party together.

"Thanks, all hands," he said. "You've done all men could do. We'll need what strength we've got left to get us ashore. So let her burn."

The boy, who had been at the wheel ever since the discovery of the fire, was relieved by Captain Nye. The boy promptly lay down on the deck, and the others followed suit, resting themselves against the time of embarking in the small boat.

At last the moment came when Captain Nye thought best to abandon his ship. His eyes filled with tears.

"Don't grieve, captain," said Barclay; "I'll pay you her value five times over. You're a good man."

As they were about to step into the boat that bumped alongside, but little below the level of the sinking deck, Barclay said curtly: "I can't leave Gunsdorf to die like that."

He himself unfastened the hatch. Gunsdorf had climbed up the ladder to keep out of water as long as possible. He was more dead than alive. They had to lift him into the boat.

She rode very low in the water and rolled precariously when she had drifted out of the lea of the doomed schooner, and when she hit the rough water she rolled quietly over and floated bottom up.

The shock of the cold water revived Gunsdorf so that he did not at once drown. He succeeded in getting hold of the boat and keeping his head out of water.

Over the inverted bows Barclay crawled out of the water and lay sprawling on the arched, slippery bottom of the boat. From this advantageous position he looked about eagerly to see whom he could help. Of that whole party only Barclay and the boy could swim. Sturtevant and Semmes, if they ever came to the surface, were never seen again by mortal eyes. The boy swam to the boat and climbed up on it, with Barclay's help.

Began to Bore a Hole Through the Bottom of the Schooner.

Then for the first time Barclay saw the agonized face of Gunsdorf. The man's grip was failing, and he knew it. At a little distance Captain Nye floated face down. His two men came to the surface, came together, clinched and died, each trying to use the other as a ladder by which to climb out of the water.

Barclay looked for a while coldly into Gunsdorf's face, and then looked away.

"For God's sake help me!"

"For Christ's sake!"

Then the little boy, his teeth chattering, said:

"'Tain't pretty to see men drown," and began to blubber.

With an oath Barclay reached for Gunsdorf and tried to draw him out of the water. It was a difficult and precarious operation.

There was a strange look in Gunsdorf's face. It was no longer hatred. There was hope in it; but, more than that, there was something that was akin to love. A miracle had been wrought in the evil man's heart.

Barclay trying to save him!

"You're a good man," he said. "I thought you were the devil."

"My man," said Barclay, "I can't get you up here. I'm sorry. My strength is petered out. If it's any comfort to you, I forgive you for what you have done. I've done plenty of evil, too. I guess we both thought we were trying to do good. We looked at life from different angles. You didn't believe that men like me were human beings; I had the same feeling about men like you. I guess that's mostly what's the matter with this world, anyway."

Holding tightly to Gunsdorf's hand, he still managed to keep the anarchist's head out of water.

All this Tommy and Celestia saw from the top of the cliffs. They had recognized the two chief actors in the drama, and Tommy's suspense over the fate of the man who had been good to him was awful to see. It was that white, quiet suspense that transcends all outcry and lamentation.

"Gunsdorf," said Barclay, "I'm slipping; I can't hold you any longer. I'm sorry."

"All right," said Gunsdorf. And he let go of Barclay's hand and sank like a stone.

"My God!" exclaimed Barclay. "What sand!"

The moment Gunsdorf's head reappeared Barclay slipped quietly into the water and tried to save him. But Gunsdorf had gone down open-mouth. He was too confused to understand the calm, steadying command of Barclay—to keep his head—to keep still.

He tried to climb upon his would-be savior, and they went down together. Then Barclay's presence of mind left him, and he, too, grappled.

And so they died—in each other's arms.

GLENN HALL COMING IN "THE LADY IN RED."

Glenn Hall, as Bruce Vernon, the artist-tenor of "The Lady in Red," the Chicago record holding musical attraction, which plays at the Majestic Wednesday evening, claims Elk Falls, Kansas, as his birthplace, but admits that the town is one not even included in the official map of the state, and that a few years ago he motored over the entire state without being able to locate the hamlet. When he was 3 years of age his parents moved to Chicago. As a boy he was a treble soloist in the choir of a Chicago church, and later sang in choirs in other western cities, which pursuit eventually brought him into concert work. He abandoned this to enter the medical school of the University of Chicago to obtain a physician's degree, with the intention of succeeding to the practice of his father. While at college he sang at chapel and was a member of the Glee club, and before he realized it his singing was of so much importance that he could not give it up. He abandoned all idea of a career in medicine and went abroad to study music. He sang extensively in Europe, appearing in concerts in Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London. He was the first American to sing at the Gewandhays in Leipsic. Upon his return to America, Mr. Hall joined the Metropolitan Grand Opera company in New York, remaining with that organization for two years. He then made another trip to Europe and studied in Florence, under Lombardi, who was Caruso's teacher. While in Italy he received a contract calling for his services with the Chicago Grand Opera company. Upon his arrival in New York he was approached by Victor Herbert with the request that he sing the tenor role in "The Madcap Duchess," and through Mr. Herbert's efforts he secured a release from the opera company and began his career in light opera. "The Lady in Red" is an operetta in which Mr. Hall's voice is heard to brilliant advantage.

AT THE TEMPLE.

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE."

This Coming Week Temple Players Will Launch Winter Season.

With the coming week the Temple theater players will launch the regular winter season, presenting as a debut offering the powerful drama of truth, "The Blindness of Virtue," Cosmo Hamilton's striking sermon on the fallacy of denying children parental instruction in sex hygiene during the period of adolescence. No more thoroughly enthralling drama on the peril of prudery between father and son and mother and daughter ever has been written than Mr. Hamilton has penned in "The Blindness of Virtue." It is intended particularly as a warning against the danger of permitting young girls to remain in ignorance of the possible results of yielding to their natural impulses. A young girl, a daughter of an English vicar, is found by her father under compromising circumstances with a young man sent to study under the vicar. The father wrongly accuses the girl, who demands to know what he means. She had been kept in total ignorance of sex and the father realized the danger to which he had subjected his girl, danger which might have resulted as it did for Mary Ann, the girl who had answered the lure of London town and had crept home broken hearted to her stricken mother.

This evening will mark the closing of the week's run of the comedy hit, "The Wrong Mr. Wright," in which the Temple players have scored almost as emphatically as in the farce, "Hello Bill." With the closing of this show the players will start on the regular season. The only change in prices will be for the orchestra seats, which will be fifty cents at the evening performance and twenty-five cents for the matinees.

AT THT EMPRESS

"O, Rome, my country, city of the soul."

Rome liked burlesque, and the oriental dance was a favorite with all the rulers. Rome was a proud and prosperous nation. She boasted of some of the greatest men that have ever lived.

Did you ever stop to think that the oriental dance originated in the bible, and is the portrayal of physical beauty and art? Burlesque is exactly what it means. It is a burlesque on the things of life.

The Monte Carlo Girls is a burlesque of today. It is full of humor from start to finish. Things of life as they should be, and as they are seen by some are always funny. This is the feature of the Monte Carlo Girls.

The Monte Carlo Girls play at the Empress this evening. They are attracting a great deal of attention. Harry Welsh and Kyra are both stars. They are among the very best in their field. Welsh is great, and Kyra is a wonder, there's no use denying that. The play is full of humor from the start, and has "just lots" of singing and dancing.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

"MILESTONES OF LIFE."

At Jefferson With "Romance of Elaine" and Keystone Comedy.

Romance, pathos and tragedy commingle in this stirring five-part Mutual masterpiece, "Milestones of Life," which stars the piquant Thanhouser star, Mignon Anderson, together with a notable cast of other well known actors including Louise Rutter, a famous stage beauty, and Helen Badgely, the wonderful Thanhouser child actress. A play of the seasons, it portrays in magnificent scenes what befalls a man and a woman in their journey through life from spring to autumn—happy in each other's love until the tragedy came that blackened their happiness—ending with their reconcillation in the winter of their joys and sorrows—life's last milestone.

The final chapter of "The Romance of Elaine" will be shown today and the identity of the mysterious Mr. X will be established. The last attraction will be one of the inimitable Keystone comedies, "Lover's Lost Control," featuring Syd Chaplin and a notable group of Associate Keystoners.

Monday the Famous Players will present America's foremost comedian, Sam Bernard, in an original five-reel comedy offering entitled, "Reg—Schmalz."

BLAME IS PUT ON LOW WAGES

FEDERAL BOARD CHAIRMAN'S VIEWS

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 28.—Low wages was found to be the basic cause of industrial unrest in the report which Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the federal commission on industrial relations, and the labor members of that body, will present to congress as a result of the commission's two-year investigation into the subject.

The report embodying the personal findings of Mr. Walsh and concurred in by Commissioners John B. Lennon, James O'Connell and Austin B. Garretson was made public here today.

"The workers of the nation, through compulsory and oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil," it was declared in the report and the resulting industrial dissatisfaction was said to have reached "proportions that already menace the social good will, and the peace of the nation."

Workers Responsible.

Responsibility for the condition under which they live was placed primarily upon the workers themselves who "blind to their collective strength and ofttimes deaf to the cries of their followers have suffered exploitation and invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance."

The report in part follows: "We find the basic cause of industrial dissatisfaction to be the low wages, or stated in another way, the fact that the workers of the nation through compulsory and oppressive methods legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil.

"We further find that unrest among the workers in industry has grown to proportions that already menace the social good will and the peace of the nation. Citizens numbering millions smart under a sense of injustice and oppression. The extent and depth of industrial unrest can hardly be exaggerated. State and national conventions of labor organizations numbering many thousands of members have cheered the names of leaders imprisoned for participation in a campaign of violence conducted as one phase of a conflict with organized employers.

"Employers have created and maintained small private armies and used these forces to intimidate and suppress their striking employes by deporting, imprisoning, assaulting and killing their employes. The spy systems are maintained to discover and forestall the movements of the enemy. The use of state troops in policing strikes has bred a bitter hostility to the military system.

Charges and Countercharges.

"Courts, legislatures and governors have been rightfully accused of serving employers to the defeat of justice, and while counter charges come from employers and their agents with almost negligible exceptions, it is the wage earners who believe, assert and prove that the very institutions of their country have been prevented by the power of the employer.

"To the support of the militant and aggressive propaganda of organized labor has come within recent years a small, but rapidly increasing host of ministers, college professors, writers, journalists and others of the professional classes distinguished in many instances by exceptional talent which they devote to agitation, with no hope of material reward.

"We find the unrest to be but the manifestation of the age long struggle of the race for freedom of opportunity for every individual to live his life to its highest ends. The unrest of the wage earners have been augmented by recent changes and developments in industry. Chief of these are the rapid and universal introduction and extension of machinery by which unskilled workers may be substituted for the skilled and an equally rapid development of rapid transportation and communication by which private capital has been enabled to organize in greater operations. Work formerly done at home or in small neighborhood shops has been transferred to great factories where the individual worker becomes an impersonal element under the control of impersonal corporations. Women in increased numbers have followed their work from the home to the factory and even children have been enlisted.

Where Profits Go.

"Now, more than ever the profits of great industries under centralized control pour into the coffers of stockholders and directors who never have so much as visited the plants, and who perform no service in return. And while vast inherited fortunes, representing zero in social service to the credit of their possessors, automatically treble and multiply in volume, two-thirds of those employes who work 12 hours a day receive less than enough to support themselves in decency and comfort.

"We find that many entire communities exist under the arbitrary economic control of corporation officials charged with the management of an industry or group of industries and we find that in such communities political liberty does not exist, and its forms are hollow mockery.

"In larger communities where espionage becomes impossible the wage earner who is unsupported by a collective organization may enjoy freedom of expression outside the workshop, but there his freedom ends and it is a freedom more apparent than real. For the house he lives in, the food he eats, the clothing he wears, the enjoyment of his wife and children and his own health and safety are endangered through the arbitrary power in fixing wages and working conditions.

Duty of Citizens.

"The responsibility for the conditions which have been described above we declare, rests primarily upon workers, who, blind to their collective strength and ofttimes deaf to the cries of their followers, have suffered exploitation and the invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance. A large measure of responsibility must however, attach to the great mass of citizens. But, until the workers themselves realize their responsibility and utilize to the full their collective power, no action, whether governmental or altruistic, can work any genuine and lasting improvement.

"We call upon our citizenship, regardless of politics, or economic conditions, to use every means of agitation, all avenues of education and every department and function of government to eliminate the injustices exposed by this commission to the end that each laborer may secure the whole product of his labor."

BUSINESS IMPROVES THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

Improvement Will Be More Rapid When Crops Begin to Move.

Business conditions generally are good throughout the country and will improve as soon as the movement of crops is well under way, according to the monthly letter on trade conditions issued for September by the Old National bank.

The letter says: "The purchasing power of the people of this country is greater today than ever before in history and will be steadily increased each month for the next few months at least. Our financial ability to handle our tremendous crops is a vitally important factor. That our crops will be tremendous is generally conceded and the total farm production will exceed in both quantity and value all previous records. On the other hand corn, oats and some of the smaller crops will probably fall far short of present estimates but a decline of several per cent from present expectations could not be considered a calamity as even with such reductions our combined crops will be record-breaking."

The letter says that the best business conditions are to be found in the western and Rocky mountain states and the poorest conditions in the southeastern states, in central New York, central Pennsylvania and on the western edge of the Pacific slope.

First National's Letter.

"It is very natural that viewing conditions from a broad standpoint there should be a great deal of optimism regarding the business situation," says the monthly letter just issued by the First National bank. "The United States has for many years had the reputation of being the spendthrift among nations and it is time for us to show the world that if we have been careless in the past we are able to correct this condition and to exercise sensible thrift and economy in the future."

NO SUBMARINE SUNK BY ENGLISH AVIATOR

Berlin, Aug. 28.—The admiralty today made denial of the official British statement that a German submarine had been sunk this week by a British aviator off the Belgian coast near Ostend. The admiralty also made a report on the attack on Aug. 16 by a German submarine off the English coast. The announcement is as follows:

"One of our submarines on Aug. 16 destroyed by gun fire the Benzol factory with the attached Benzol warehouses and furnaces near Harrington, England. The statement of the British press that the submarine attacked the open towns of Harrington, Parton and Whitehaven is inexact.

"The same submarine on Aug. 15 was fired at from a great distance in the Irish sea by a large passenger steamer, probably a Royal mail steam packet, but was not hit.

"The British admiralty announced on Aug. 27 that a German submarine had been destroyed and sunk off Ostend by a British seaplane. This is inexact. The submarine was attacked, but not hit, and returned to port undamaged."

The British statement referred to by the German admiralty was made on Aug. 26. It stated that Squadron Commander Arthur Bigsworth had destroyed single-handed a German submarine off Ostend. The announcement contained these words: "The submarine was observed to be completely wrecked, and sank off Ostend."

The statement filed in Cettinje on Aug. 26 and delayed in transmission is as follows: "A lively engagement occurred yesterday near the mouth of the gulf of Cattaro (in Dalmatia near the Montenegrin border) between outposts and rather strong detachments of Austrians. The fight lasted two hours. The Austrians retired, leaving numerous dead on the field. Ten prisoners remained in our hands.

GERMAN SYSTEM OF EDUCATION WRONG

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 28.—That Germany was the victim of a wrong system of education was the declaration made by John Mez, of Munich, Germany, at the closing session here last night of the National Education association. "Internationalism" was the subject of his address. He said in part:

"Those in my country who made war meant it for the world's gain. They did not mean to destroy. They are the victims of a wrong system of education. They have been taught nothing beyond an irrational conception of militarism.

"Everyone who lives in the United States and loves civilization and humanity should be grateful to the man who has kept America out of the war. Education in internationalism means educating the old men first to change the ideal that collective homicide is the proper thing.

"The first duty of a man is to defend his country, but not to attack any other country.

"The most gratifying sight in the world is the spectacle of the college presidents of the country talking peace, for education is the one great agency which will wipe out the stupidity of militarism."

David Bancroft Johnson, president of Winthrop Normal and Industrial college, Rockhill, S. C., the new president of the National Education association, reviewed the history of the organization and declared that the convention was the greatest in its record.

Two new members were initiated and three applications were received at the meeting of Wayne circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. The circle will be represented at the national encampment at Washington by Mrs. Alice Sink.

WORRY IS TELLING ON BERNSTORFF.

WAS GRANDSON OF FT. WAYNE PIONEER

A. F. Leonhardt, of New Orleans, Dies Suddenly in Denver

A. F. Leonhardt, former postmaster at New Orleans, president of the board of trade there and long active in grain trade circles of the south, who died suddenly in Denver a few days ago, was a grandson of Christian Heinrich Odendahl, a Fort Wayne pioneer who will be well remembered by older citizens here. Miss Henrietta Odendahl, of this city, is an aunt of the deceased. Concerning the death of Mr. Leonhardt, the New Orleans Picayune says:

"A. F. Leonhardt, former postmaster and prominent in grain and board of trade circles, died at the Albany hotel in Denver, Colo., at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mr. Leonhardt, accompanied by his wife, was on a western trip undertaken to recover his health following a recent severe illness.

"A few weeks ago Mr. Leonhardt was stricken with acute indigestion while riding home in a Prytania car. For several days he hovered between life and death, but gradually came around and apparently recovered. In order to completely regain health, however, he left last Wednesday night for a trip through the Rocky mountains, planning to visit the San Francisco exposition. Mrs. Leonhardt accompanied him. They spent two days in St. Louis, visiting Mr. Leonhardt's brother, Robert Leonhardt, and then went to Denver, where they arrived Sunday. Sunday night Mr. Leonhardt became ill and he died shortly after the noon hour Monday.

"Mr. Leonhardt was 55 years of age, and thirty-five years a resident of New Orleans. He was born in St. Louis, Mo. For many years he was connected with the firm of Glover and Odendahl in the grain business. When this firm retired about ten years ago he went into business for himself and remained actively in it until his death. He was president of the New Orleans board of trade and a director of that institution. He was postmaster of New Orleans for three years, being appointed by President Taft. Joseph Voegtle, appointed by President Wilson, succeeded Mr. Leonhardt. Mr. Leonhardt was the representative of the board of trade on the civil service board of the dock board.

"Mr. Leonhardt was twice married. By his first wife, who died in 1905, he had three children, Alexander Leonhardt, who is with the firm of Westfeldt Brothers, New Orleans; Mrs. Maurice L. Warner, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Frank E. Mahoney, of Chattanooga, all of whom are living. The son, Alexander Leonhardt, was visiting his sister in Chattanooga at the time of the father's death. Mr. Leonhardt's second marriage was to Mrs. Marion Hill Dodge, of Baltimore, about six years ago.

"Due announcement will be made of the funeral after arrival of the body from Denver.

"Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Mahoney and Alexander Leonhardt are on their way to New Orleans to attend the funeral of their father."

ACUTE HEART TROUBLE.

Mrs. Leonhardt Will Leave with the Body for New Orleans.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 28.—Alex Frederick Leonhardt, former postmaster of New Orleans, La., was suddenly stricken by an attack of acute palpitation of the heart shortly after his arrival in Denver at 9 o'clock last evening and died at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in his rooms at the Albany hotel.

With him at the time was Mrs. Leonhardt, his wife, who was accompanying him to the Pacific coast expositions. Mrs. Leonhardt tonight is prostrated as a result of her husband's death and is under the care of a physician and nurse.

Two physicians, Drs. C. A. Ellis and A. F. Arnell, were in attendance upon Mr. Leonhardt throughout the attack and everything possible was done for him.

It is thought the attack was caused by the high altitude of Denver, although Mrs. Leonhardt stated that her husband had had a similar attack just four weeks ago tomorrow, before they left New Orleans. Arrangements were made tonight for Mrs. Leonhardt to leave here at 1:50 o'clock tomorrow afternoon over the Union Pacific railroad, via St. Louis, for New Orleans with her husband's body.

Machine Driven by Elmer Beach Strikes Pile of Dirt.

A jitney bus driven by Elmer Beach, 3212 South Broadway, struck a pile of dirt thrown into the street by a contractor doing some work at 712 East Wayne street, causing it to turn over, early Friday evening. It was badly damaged. Edward G. Hollenbach was a passenger in the car at the time. Both Beach and Hollenbach were slightly injured.

The Secret of a Good Figure

often lies in the brassiere. Hundreds of thousands of women wear the Bien-Jolie Brassiere for the reason that they regard it as necessary as a corset. It supports the bust and back and gives the figure the youthful outline fashion decrees.

BIEN JOLIE (BE-AN JO-LEE) BRASSIERES are the daintiest, most serviceable garments imaginable. Only the best of materials are used—for instance, "Walohn", a flexible boning of great durability—absolutely rustless—permitting laundering without removal.

They come in all styles, and your local Dry Goods dealer will show them to you on request. If he does not carry them, he can easily get them for you by writing to us. Send for an illustrated booklet showing styles that are in high favor.

If you buy our quality you will find that it pays to buy the good kind, as it means efficiency and satisfaction.

It costs you nothing to examine our superb line of cutlery, so come and have a look.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 28.—Moderate dealings in war shares and coppers featured today's early trading. General Electric and Baldwin Locomotive together with American Car and Allis Chalmers were the most prominent industrials while Guggenheim Exploration and National Lead led the metal group. American Linseed was a point higher and United Railways preferred rose 1¼ to 42½. Pittsburgh Coal advanced 2 points to 37. Tennessee Copper yielded a point to 57½, soon declining to 54½. There were virtually no dealings in the railroads where the only change of note was a five point advance to 60 in Cleveland, Cincinnati & St. Louis preferred.

Today's short session of the stock market lacked the activity and excitement which featured recent operations. Trading was light and again confined to war shares and coppers, with a sprinkling of unclassified issues. Tennessee Copper was the only heavy issue of the active group falling four points to 54½. Pittsburgh coal issues added to recent gains on reports of new financing which will provide for back payment on the preferred stock. The common rose 3 points to 38 and the preferred 6¾ to 106½. U. S. Steel led the list in volume of offerings but yielded fractionally. The closing was irregular. Bonds were lower.

"Around the World or Bust"

Jack London, the author, said a woman could work her way around the world as well as a man. A friend of London's said she could not. So forthwith London sold another story, and, being quite flush with money, offered to back his convictions with a bet.

"How much?" asked the friend.

"Five thousand," said London.

"You're on," declared the friend.

That occurred in 1911. Recently the Baroness Sylvaine arrived in America—the first woman of this country to work her way around the world. Jack London collected the $5,000 wager. As for the baroness—well, she married while on her unique journey, and now receives an income from her late husband's estate. She did not learn of his death until she arrived in New York.

The baroness was Mrs. Hilda Gilbert before she left on her trip around the world. She lived near London's home in California, and was the first woman to respond when London and his friend let their bet be known.

LIKE MOVIE HEROINE'S EXPLOITS.

The Baroness Sylvaine had many thrilling adventures while encircling the globe. She hobnobbed with a Zulu chief and made such an impression that she can become one of his wives any time she wants to settle down in Africa. She also won the admiration of an Indian rajah by her ease in the saddle. And she was arrested as a spy in Russia.

Probably the most exciting of her adventures occurred in the China Sea, where the baroness was instrumental in saving an English steamer from being sunk by the German cruiser Emden. At the time she was the only woman passenger on the steamer Lai Sang of the Indo-China Line, which was bound from Singapore to Hongkong.

The Emden overhauled the Lai Sang after firing several shots across her bow. All of the English steamer's passengers were ordered to take to small boats, as it was the intention of the warship's commander to sink his prize.

"I have a woman aboard," replied the captain of the English boat. "She is an American citizen."

The commander of the Emden was chivalrous. He sent back word that he did not want to force a woman to take to the small boats. The Lai Sang was allowed to proceed.

HERE IS HER OWN STORY.

Baroness Sylvaine, or plain Mrs. Sylvaine, as she prefers to be called, sailed from New York on Jan. 28, 1911. Her trip from then on is best told in her own language:

"I had only 10 shillings when I arrived in London. I met a man who had written a skit and he suggested that I play a part in it. I was quite willing, but it was necessary that I play a mandolin. I confessed that I knew nothing about the instrument. 'But I shall teach you,' said the man. And he did—very badly.

"The skit had a run—and then I faced hard times once more. For six months I fought the wolf from the door, and at the end of that time I was about to be evicted when in desperation I wrote some articles. I sent a sample to the Pall Mall. Imagine my surprise on learning they accepted it and wanted more! They told me they would give me 3 guineas a thousand words.

"Alas, came a sad blow. The editor told me they paid only on publication, and that it would be six months before they began to publish them. And there I was, almost about to starve! But I did not give up in despair. I gave the editor the talk of my life.

"'But it is never done, you know,' he said when I had finished. That is usually the last word for the English. I pleaded again. He gave in and handed me a check for $200 with the admonition that I should not tell anyone. I was happy beyond words.

"Then I went to the continent as companion for a woman. I left her in Paris, and managed to get along all right for a time. When my money ran low and I was at my wits' ends I thought of how I had learned to play the mandolin. I was given 'bookings' in several cafes, and though I still played very badly I managed to keep engaged.

BECOMES CAFE'S SENSATION.

"I always went to the cafes masked, wore my hair very brainstorm, and never appeared until midnight. They called me 'La Flame.' I had a boy with me who looked like an East Indian. After I played he would go among the audience and take up a collection. Then we would make a quick getaway in a taxicab. I did the same thing in Vienna.

"After a time I became the mystery of the cafes. Who was the woman in the mask who played the mandolin so badly? This question was on the lips of every cafe habitue. One night an impetuous American sought to solve the riddle. He took hold of my mask and would have torn it off but for a Frenchman.

"His name was Pierre Sylvaine—and he was a perfectly good little baron. I married him. When he learned that I was trying to work my way around the world he became angry. 'You shall go no further,' he said, I insisted that I should. You see it was a matter of honor with me—Mr. London had bet $5,000 that I could make the trip. I had to finish it.

"I left the baron and went to London. He followed. 'I see you intend finishing the trip,' he said. 'Well and good. But promise you will come back to me afterward.' I promised. In London I went on in cabaret, billed as 'La Flame,' the mystery of the Paris cafes, I became the rage. Bookings were offered me galore. One of these was for South Africa. I would have much preferred to remain in Europe, but the South Africa offer meant money and progress on my way around the world—so I took it.

"In Africa I heard so much about the Zulu chief Laduna that I decided to visit him in his native kraal. It was a two-day trip by ox team across the veldt—and then a trip through the woods in a litter.

"The chief received me hospitably. He was charming. First he spoke to me in Kaffir, and perceiving that I did not understand him, he talked English. He was a magnificent creature physically—6 feet 8 inches. His proudest possession was a kitchen chair which he kept in the middle of the house and sat upon as though it were a throne.

CAN BE AFRICAN QUEEN.

"I seemed to make quite an impression on Chief Laduna and can become one of his wives if ever I decide to settle down in Africa. Isn't that too funny for words!"

Baroness Sylvaine laughed aloud.

"Next I went to Bombay. On the way there I became acquainted with a young naval lieutenant and his sister. They had been brought up in India and had known the Rajah of Rutlam from childhood. I had always wanted to see a real live rajah, so accepted their invitation to visit him.

"The rajah was very highly educated—a graduate of Oxford. He dressed richly in brocaded coats, rich silk turbans and many jewels—he was fully aware that he was a king and the son of kings. He was the best polo player in all India. I stayed two weeks at his guest house and rode with him to the polo field every morning. He liked me because I could ride, and I also pleased him by praising his polo pony.

"From there I went to Agra. I was stricken with typhoid fever and was in a hospital for six weeks. When I recovered I went to China. Luck again fell across my path. In Hongkong I received a commission from a paper to go to Canton. There was a 'revolutionette,' as I called it, going on there. I was asked to write my impressions. Summed up they are: Were it not for disease and the fact that most of the men are students, the Chinese would rule the world.

"Now to tell you how I came to be arrested as a spy. While in China I saw the name of Vladivostok on the map and decided to run over there. Hearing of my intention, a man I had become acquainted with asked me to undertake a mission for him—to deliver some important private papers to his wife in Vladivostok. We agreed on a cable code. I was to send him the word 'seventy' if I succeeded in finding his wife, and 'fifty' should I fail.

"I found her, delivered the papers, and went to the cable office to send the word 'seventy.' But war had been declared; there was martial law and they suspected that I was a spy.

OUTWITS RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

"I was taken before the commandant. He asked me the meaning of 'seventy.' Of course, I could not tell him that 'seventy' meant the papers have been delivered. He would be sure that I was a spy then, and heaven only knows what would happen to poor me.

"The commandant could not speak English. I could not speak Russian. For three hours we were at a deadlock—with my fate in the balance. Finally, I made him understand that 'seventy' meant 'seventy rubles,' and I was allowed to go."

The baroness related other thrilling adventures, including that in which the German warship Emden figured.

"I did not learn until I reached New York that Baron Sylvaine, my husband, had died, and I was to receive an income from his estate," added the baroness. "Of course, I was sorry not to have remained with him—but what was I to do? I was honor bound to attempt working my way around the world."

Jack London wears one of those "what-did-I-tell-you" sort of smiles, the while he speculates on whether to bank the $5,000 or spend it in travel.

Constructing a Great Sewer

Drilling, blasting and cutting their way through solid rock at an average depth of 65 feet below the streets of St. Louis, 500 men are at work night and day on a tunnel which, when finished in the fall of 1916, will be four miles long, almost wide enough to run two street cars through abreast, and will cost the city approximately $3,000,000. This is the new Mill Creek storm sewer, built to relieve the present Mill Creek sewer in time of heavy rains.

Work on the project has been going on since the middle of October, and up to this time there have already been 6,000 feet of tunnel hollowed out of the solid rock, in addition to 500 feet of sewer completed in what is called the open cut, between Broadway and the river. There will be no tunneling necessary in this section. The reinforced concrete tube will be laid after the excavation of a trough of the proper size.

There are 2,200 feet of the open cut work, in all, and 17,000 feet of the tunnel, making a total length of 20,000 feet, almost four miles. Nine-tenths of the tunneling is through rock.

A TRIP THROUGH THE TUNNEL.

The descent down any of the eight shafts, which mark the various sections of the sewer, is made by means of a steam-operated lift, on which the cars of mud and broken stone are brought to the surface. Being lowered into one of these shafts, several of which are 90 feet deep, is like the descent into a coal mine. One drops from the noise of the street to a damp gloomy cavern 90 feet below, lit only by incandescent lamps at intervals of 20 or 25 yards, but noisy with the roar of machinery, the grinding of the drills and the shouts of the mud-bespattered men at their work. And all the while, there is the constant drip of the seepage water from the rock overhead covering the tunnel floor to a depth of from three to six inches.

The walls, the floor and the vault are of rough rock and down the center of the passage runs a double narrow gauge railroad system, along which, at intervals, a tired and muddy donkey splashes on his way to the shaft with a car of broken rock in tow. Running along the walls of the passage, the longest of which is at present 700 feet, is a pipe line about 10 inches in diameter through which a constant flow of air is forced to the workers at the far end of the tube, creating a regular circulation of air through the tunnel to the entrance shaft and keeping the passage almost perfectly ventilated. A gutter also follows the wall, in which the seepage water is carried off to a well at the shaft, from which it is pumped into nearby sewers.

TO BE SIXTEEN FEET WIDE.

It is the plan of the contractors in charge of the work to hollow out the passage from the rock for its entire length before any of the interior concrete finish is applied. The inside of the sewer, when finished, will be in the shape of a horse shoe with a slightly curved bottom, and will be 16½ feet across and in height. The present passage that is being blasted out, however is about 19 feet high and wide.

Four "shots" are fired in each 24 hours' blasting, each shot, which is distributed among 24 holes drilled in the rock at the end of the tunnel, requiring 72 pounds of dynamite. These charges are set off in three separate explosions, which together remove a section of rock 8 by 13 feet and 5 feet deep. All workmen leave the tunnel at the time of firing as a matter of precaution, as the rock is often hurled as far as 50 feet. Due to the proximity of civilization, however, these charges are only half as heavy as the ones usually used in tunneling.

The city engineer discovered that the shaking of the houses and the breaking of the windows that have caused so many complaints from the residents in the neighborhood of Sixth and Rutger sts. and elsewhere along the course of the sewer, have not been the result of the rocking of the earth by the blasts of dynamite fired underground, as is generally supposed. They have been caused, instead, by air pressure. The shock of the explosion in the underground passage suddenly compresses the air in the tunnel and forces it out the shafts with such force that windows in the neighborhood are blown in and walls of adjoining buildings shaken. These disturbances are noticeable only in the vicinity of the shaft openings, and as the tunnel grows longer the air pressure at the openings grows less.

TERMINUS OF THE SEWER.

The floor of the sewer is on the same level for the entire 20,000 feet, no slope being allowed to aid the drainage as is customary in the ordinary sewer. This is on account of its being a storm sewer, carrying no foul water, the pressure of the water in the shafts at the end of the tunnel in time of heavy rains being enough to force the flow.

The western terminus of the work is at Vandeventer and Duncan avenues, from whence it runs east through a right of way to Spring avenue, south under Spring to Chouteau avenue, east to Theresa street, south to Rutger street, east to Jefferson avenue, north to Hickory street, east to Ninth street, south to Rutger again, and thence east to the river. The greatest depth of the flow line is at Grand and Chouteau avenues, where it is 130 feet below street level.

The work has progressed so far without any fatalities, despite the large number of men employed and the hazardous conditions under which they work.

Time to Settle Up.

An editor was talking about the famous English astronomer, Sir Robert Ball, who has recently declared that radium proves the earth to be 800,000,000 years old.

"Sir Robert Ball is as full of fun as of learning," said the editor. "Once I dined with him and a half-dozen other scientists at Stratford.

"At the end of the dinner Sir Robert's eyes twinkled and he said to the landlady of the quaint Stratford inn:

"'Madam, I am going to give you a lesson in astronomy. Have you ever heard of the great platonic year, when everything must return to its first condition? Listen, madam: In 26,000 years we shall all be here again, on the same day and at the same hour, eating a dinner precisely like this one. Will you give us credit till then?"

"'Gladly,' the landlady replied. 'It is just 26,000 years since you were here before, though, and you left without paying then. Settle the old bill, and I'll trust you with the new.'"

A Queer Error.

The late Ambrose L. Thomas, the advertising expert of Chicago, once told a story about two doctors in an address on advertising.

"To illustrate my point," he said, appropos of an advertising error, "I'll tell you about my friend Bones.

"Bones was taken down very bad and, his family physician being out of town, a specialist was called in.

"But the family physician unexpectedly returned, and he and the specialist entered Bones' chamber together. They found the man in a high fever and partially unconscious. Each put his hand under the bedclothes to feel Bones' pulse, and each accidentally got hold of the other's hand.

"'He has typhoid,' said the first physician.

"'Nothing of the kind,' said the other. 'He's only drunk.'"

Red Smyth got into the Brooklyn affair Friday, being sent in in the fifth to run for Pitcher Dell. There were two outs when he went in and he had no chance to do a thing, as a pop-up closed the inning.

Freddie Bratchi is a regular member of the Columbus American association team and is the clean-up man for the trailing Ohioans. In yesterday's game he hit in one run, made five catches in his position in center field, and one error. He is credited with a throw to first from center, catching a base runner a foot off the bag.

Steil, of Grand Rapids, and Sykes, of Dayton, both are in the regular Columbus line-up, but neither of them has played such spectacular ball as Bratchi has ladled out in the past few days.

Holderman has not broken into the Milwaukee line-up yet, although he probably will go there within a few days.

FULLBACK GETS MORE PROTECTION

However, Football Rule Changes Are Slight This Season.

Special pains have been taken by the men who rejiggered the football rules for the coming season, to provide the fullback with more protection than he has ever had before and that means the fullback is going to be used more in carrying the ball.

The rules, just issued, show that in regard to the fullback, distinction is made between "running into" the player and "roughing" him. The player who "runs into" the fullback will cause his team to be penalized 15 yards, while "roughing" the fullback will not only bring the 15-yard penalty, but cause the offending player to be disqualified.

There is always the temptation to manhandle the man carrying the ball. The more the fullback is bumped the more penalties and disqualifications the other side will suffer, so coaches will see that the fullback is often in position to be bumped.

Other changes are slight. The committee decided the game could not be improved much. The flocking of substitutes onto the field in the last period is prohibited by a rule which says resubstitutions will not be allowed except at the beginning of a period.

The Center, in passing the ball, will have to let it out of his hands after his motion is started. That will prevent delayed plays in which the center held the ball, until a player could come up and take it.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 28.—Frank Guigni, third baseman for the Seattle Northwestern baseball club, and formerly with the Spokane Indians, was purchased by the Benedicts recently for a life contract. He signed up with the married men's club when he led Miss Mayme Laws, popular Spokane girl, to the altar.

Guigni was fanned by Cupid a few months ago, when his leg was broken at the opening of the season. The little god knocked a home run and the ball player had no chance when he met Miss Laws. He made a hit with her and she doubled at their first meeting.

Guigni is a former Stanford and Santa Clara university ball player and will return to California at the end of the season to enter business, he says.

BY BROWN HOLMES.

The national amateur golf championship tournament at Detroit, Mich., attracted 138 entrants and golf fans are wondering if there is, somewhere in that army of club swingers, some man who can rise up in his might and take the big play from the chaps who are always in the limelight.

Three players stand out most prominently—Jerry Travers, Francis Ouimet and Chick Evans. They have won so many tournaments it has become monotonous.

These three have the old game worked down to such a science and have so much "form," which is a powerful factor, that whenever they go into a meet the question of who will win lacks punch and interest centers around the runner-up possibilities.

There may be, though, some "dark horse" in that lot who will knock old form and older science galley west and by sheer pluck or sheer luck bat tradition into the discard.

If it does happen that Travers and Evans get into the final round, the big stake will be at the mercy of two players who are opposites and extremes in golfing temperament.

Travers, just ordinary at medal play, is a wonder against a personal opponent. Evans, a star at medal play, may be wonderfully efficient or wierdly incapable against a personal opponent. In match play Evans seems to act as the spirit moves him; Travers is at his best under pressure.

It has happened that a "dark horse" has won in a big meet. Ouimet was known little better than some of the caddies when he beat Vardon and Ray, the English professionals, for the open championship. There may be a dark one in this combat.

Indianapolis, Aug. 28.—Governor Samuel M. Ralston has issued the following Labor day proclamation:

"The statute of Indiana designates the first Monday in September as Labor day and emphasizes its importance by making it a legal holiday. This is not done because there is a fixed laboring class in this country. There is no such class here. The man who labors with his hands today may tomorrow, through his inguinity, direct the commercial interest of his community or state. And the man who directs today the commercial interest of his community or state may tomorrow occupy the position of day laborer; and this is as it should be in a free country, where every man's standing is, broadly speaking, fixed by his own industry and merit, or the lack thereof.

"The public is glad to recognize the worth to society of those who work and to honor them for the strength and stability they afford the state and nation. Without labor there would not be a home in which to shelter wife and children—there would not be a cathedral in which to worship God and weave stronger the bonds of brotherly love. Labor should not, therefore, be looked upon as a misfortune, but as a blessing. When justice prevails between it and capital, society enjoys prosperity and contentment, and out of these come love and laughter.

"Labor is an unmixed blessing when it is accompanied by the virtues of frugality, thrift and honesty. On these manhood is builded, and those enjoying a manhood builded out of labor should not overburden it through the lack of frugality. One supporting himself and those dependent upon him either by labor or by other means, should not overlook the fact that 'frugality is founded on the principle that all riches have limits,' whether accumulated through labor or otherwise.

"Frugality then has a moral as well as an economic value; and this fact, coupled with the duty of government toward and the indebtedness of society to labor, should not be overlooked by those who will discuss on the day set apart in honor of labor the things that make for its welfare.

"In recognition of these truths, I, Samuel M. Ralston, as governor of the state of Indiana, do designate and proclaim Monday, the sixth day of September, 1915, as Labor day and on this day I direct that all offices, state and municipal, be closed; and I urge all the people of Indiana, in so far as it is practicable for them to do so, to observe this day as a public holiday in honor of labor, by closing their places of business and by turning from their usual avocations for the day, or by otherwise giving fitting expression of their appreciation of labor."

By Floyd King.

Fifty years ago a red-headed, freckled-face little lad was running around in Miami county, Indiana, and he was looking for work, not for play. His circumstances forced him to work, and from the first position he held in a livery stable, working for fifty cents a week, up to the present time, this lad has never taken a vacation.

At one time Ben Wallace only owned the cheap overalls and suspenders he wore. He did not inherit a dollar, has never had any pull except that of his own brain. At one time, he did not have money enough to buy feed for his pet canary bird. Today he owns one of the largest herds of elephants in the country and is operating one of the largest circus organizations in the world.

He is president of one of the largest banking institutions in Indiana, the Wabash Valley Trust company, at Peru. He owns one of the largest department stores in the state. He owns a theater and all sorts of land holdings in that city. But chief of Mr. Wallace's wealth is centered in land. He believes land is the safest and best place for money, and if he were young now, according to his statement, he would be a simple son of the soil. Raised on a farm, he has become Indiana's greatest farmer, owning and operating 3,500 acres of land that could not be bought for less than $350 per acre.

When the gorgeous street pageant of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus passes over the streets of Fort Wayne, Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6, the small and poor lads of the city may find encouragement in the thought that the owner of that magnificent display was once as poor as any boy, but that by following two rules, of honesty and unfailing work, he became a mighty captain of industry, his circuis interests, as large as they are, being comparatively a side issue with him.

Every well-posted farmer in the Eastern states knows of "Ben" Wallace, of Peru, Indiana, just as every little tot knows of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. Notwithstanding his wealth, Mr. Wallace was never too busy to extend every possible thought and care to his aged mother and never too proud to stoop to speak to the poor. Today when with his shows, he is sociable with every one of about 1,000 employees. Even many of the humble workmen he calls by their first name. He classes them among his friends, just as he does capitalists and noted persons numbered among his acquaintances.

He shuns the limelight and never likes to be pointed out as "Mr. Wallace." Frequently people out of curiosity may step up to him and ask if he is Mr. Wallace. He is almost sure to answer, "I am the boss hostler," however, not denying that he is Mr. Wallace.

Although this Hoosier showman could buy and own all the circuses in the world, he has never desired to own and operate but one complete organization, which never divides or splits. Early in life it was his ambition to build up "the highest class circus in the world" and since that was attained he has constantly maintained the high standard. When buying horses, he could buy cheap animals, but he insists on buying the best. When he buys a suit of clothes, this same idea is kept in mind. He prefers to have one good suit of clothes rather than two suits that aggregate the same price.

But it was when he bought outright the great Carl Hagenbeck's animal shows, a master hand was displayed in the amusement world and by the genuine combination of that unequaled animal show with his own three-ring circus, the redheaded lad of Peru, Ind., became a "circus king."

A big modern circus and menagerie probably embrace more different kinds of system and discipline than any other business in which men engage for profit. It is a fact not generally known that the average number of circuses starting out each spring would foot up to the amazing total of 200. Where they go no one knows. They start out buoyantly enough, but somehow they never seem to get back. When one considers that this has been going on in America for the past 75 years, it is really remarkable that so few men have succeeded in the circus business. It seems pretty clear that a variety of genius not common is necessary to become a successful circus proprietor.

There are only three or four well-known circus enterprises today, and two of them "Hagenbeck" and "Wallace," are among the most prominent. The combination of the Wallace circus as made several years ago with the Hagenbeck animal aggregation, has developed a show different from the other circuses—the trained wild animals giving a feature both interesting and pleasing.

Sylvester Wikard, of State street, and Mrs. Sarah Knight, of Randolph street, have returned from Forest, O., where they attended the funeral of their uncle.

"Frugality then has a moral as well as an economic value; and this fact, coupled with the duty of government toward and the indebtedness of society to labor, should not be overlooked by those who will discuss on the day set apart in honor of labor the things that make for its welfare.

"In recognition of these truths, I, Samuel M. Ralston, as governor of the state of Indiana, do designate and proclaim Monday, the sixth day of September, 1915, as Labor day and on this day I direct that all offices, state and municipal, be closed; and I urge all the people of Indiana, in so far as it is practicable for them to do so, to observe this day as a public holiday in honor of labor, by closing their places of business and by turning from their usual avocations for the day, or by otherwise giving fitting expression of their appreciation of labor."

By Floyd King.

Fifty years ago a red-headed, freckled-face little lad was running around in Miami county, Indiana, and he was looking for work, not for play. His circumstances forced him to work, and from the first position he held in a livery stable, working for fifty cents a week, up to the present time, this lad has never taken a vacation.

At one time Ben Wallace only owned the cheap overalls and suspenders he wore. He did not inherit a dollar, has never had any pull except that of his own brain. At one time, he did not have money enough to buy feed for his pet canary bird. Today he owns one of the largest herds of elephants in the country and is operating one of the largest circus organizations in the world.

He is president of one of the largest banking institutions in Indiana, the Wabash Valley Trust company, at Peru. He owns one of the largest department stores in the state. He owns a theater and all sorts of land holdings in that city. But chief of Mr. Wallace's wealth is centered in land. He believes land is the safest and best place for money, and if he were young now, according to his statement, he would be a simple son of the soil. Raised on a farm, he has become Indiana's greatest farmer, owning and operating 3,500 acres of land that could not be bought for less than $350 per acre.

When the gorgeous street pageant of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus passes over the streets of Fort Wayne, Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6, the small and poor lads of the city may find encouragement in the thought that the owner of that magnificent display was once as poor as any boy, but that by following two rules, of honesty and unfailing work, he became a mighty captain of industry, his circuis interests, as large as they are, being comparatively a side issue with him.

Every well-posted farmer in the Eastern states knows of "Ben" Wallace, of Peru, Indiana, just as every little tot knows of the Hagenbeck-Wallace shows. Notwithstanding his wealth, Mr. Wallace was never too busy to extend every possible thought and care to his aged mother and never too proud to stoop to speak to the poor. Today when with his shows, he is sociable with every one of about 1,000 employees. Even many of the humble workmen he cals by their first name. He classes them among his friends, just as he does capitalists and noted persons numbered among his acquaintances.

He shuns the limelight and never likes to be pointed out as "Mr. Wallace." Frequently people out of curiosity may step up to him and ask if he is Mr. Wallace. He is almost sure to answer, "I am the boss hostler," however, not denying that he is Mr. Wallace.

Although this Hoosier showman could buy and own all the circuses in the world, he has never desired to own and operate but one complete organization, which never divides or splits. Early in life it was his ambition to build up "the highest class circus in the world" and since that was attained he has constantly maintained the high standard. When buying horses, he could buy cheap animals, but he insists on buying the best. When he buys a suit of clothes, this same idea is kept in mind. He prefers to have one good suit of clothes rather than two suits that aggregate the same price.

But it was when he bought outright the great Carl Hagenbeck's animal shows, a master hand was displayed in the amusement world and by the genuine combination of that unequaled animal show with his own three-ring circus, the redheaded lad of Peru, Ind., became a "circus king."

A big modern circus and menagerie probably embrace more different kinds of system and discipline than any other business in which men engage for profit. It is a fact not generally known that the average number of circuses starting out each spring would foot up to the amazing total of 200. Where they go no one knows. They start out buoyantly enough, but somehow they never seem to get back. When one considers that this has been going on in America for the past 75 years, it is really remarkable that so few men have succeeded in the circus business. It seems pretty clear that a variety of genius not common is necessary to become a successful circus proprietor.

There are only three or four well-known circus enterprises today, and two of them "Hagenbeck" and "Wallace," are among the most prominent. The combination of the Wallace circus as made several years ago with the Hagenbeck animal aggregation, has developed a show different from the other circuses—the trained wild animals giving a feature both interesting and pleasing.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse. Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and on a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets the business barons who are converted to her new gospel. She makes an impression on the society world. Tommy joins the labor ranks. Tommy plays Joseph to the wife of a modern Potiphar and is rescued from a lynching party by Celestia. She prevents a massacre of strikers, and settles the strike. Mrs. Gunsdorf and Mary Blackstone conspire. Stilliter, jealous, begins to use his hypnotic power treacherously. Barclay begins a campaign for the presidential nomination and Celestia spouts her propaganda of efficiency as Barclay's platform. Tommy opposes her and Mary Blackstone plots Celestia's death. The plot fails, and Mrs. Gunsdorf dies. Stilliter hypnotizes Celestia to join him, prepares for their marriage, and wires Barclay she has gone back to heaven. Tommy and Freddy the Ferret rescue her and take her, still under Stilliter's unholy spell, to the cave she knew as heaven. Stilliter attempts to murder Tommy and again flees with Celestia. Barclay abjures greed and lust of power and desires real greatness. Freddy rescues Celestia from Stilliter, who starts a forest fire and is drowned while trying to escape from it. Tommy finds the Ferret and Celestia and in the cave tells her her story. Back in New York she publicly accuses the triumvirate.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT

Gordon Barclay's servants had orders to admit no one without orders. The city was in a turmoil. With each fresh edition of the newspapers the situation of the conspirators became more serious. In the public parks effigies of them were hanged or burned. It became necessary to keep a cordon of police about Barclay's house. In Semmes' house and Sturtevant's no window remained whole. For twenty hours these two men had been Barclay's guests.

Gunsdorf's great hour had come—that hour for which he had plotted all his life, and lied for and schemed for. He had been the leading figure in the mob that had tried to lynch the triumvirate in the first burst of rage. And he found himself suddenly at the head of all the lawless elements in the city. He was drunk with power and a sense of his own importance. But openly he spoke of his love for mankind.

Through a man friendly to him and deep in Gunsdorf's councils, Tommy learned that the life of the man who had adopted him and been good to him was in danger. His house was to be stormed over the heads of the police, and himself hanged or torn to pieces, as might happen.

All their differences fled from Tommy's mind, and he remembered only their mutual affection; so he hurried to the old familiar house and was presently admitted.

"It's just to say a few words," said Tommy, and he told Barclay what Gunsdorf was planning for that very day.

"We'll go to Gull Island," Barclay said simply, "till this thing has blown over. I suppose you are not unhappy about what has happened. It's a pity she came back. . . . Tommy, when we quarreled I was ambitious for power only. Later I began to think that Celestia was a real panacea for a sick world. So that if I had been destined to rule, I would have ruled for the good of the people. I want you to know that what began in cynicism ended in faith and honesty. I have put you back in my will for practically everything I possess. Carlton Fitch has turned knave. Mary, if she marries him, will be worthy of him."

"You'll need somebody to keep house for you at Gull Island," said Tommy. He was too moved to refer to what he had just learned. "I'll get Celestia there as quickly as I can."

"Have you married her?"

Tommy looked very manly when he said that he had. And Barclay smiled one of his old-time dazzling smiles.

"And I think," he said finally, "that you had better get out of this house as quickly as you can. I'm going, too. I can't afford to be a hero."

They shook hands and parted, never to meet in this life again.

Late that night Tommy and Celestia and Freddie the Ferret, whom Tommy was trying to train to be his valet, caught the last boat for Bartell's, on Bartell's Island, from which Gull's Island may be reached in an hour in a fast launch. They had had no word of what had happened in New York.

Tommy, without arousing suspicion, could not find out if Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant had gone on ahead, or were following.

"If they are behind us," he said to Celestia, "they'll have to charter something. Perhaps father will come all the way by boat—that would be best. His own yacht would be spotted. But he'll work something."

In this island retreat, open and ready for the master the year round, the triumvirate, if only they could reach it, would be as safe from mob violence as on a ship at sea.

A steep climb, a wild expanse of star-lit moor, little ancient trees growing very close together, a strong perfume of bayberry bushes, of sweet fern and roses, and then the low-ceilinged, softly lighted hall, with many menservants, - cool, delightful night, soundly slept—these were Celestia's first impression of Gull Island.

In the morning she went with her husband to the eastern cliffs, and she had her first look at the ocean—sullenly tumbling, white-maned—under a gray and sullen sky.

Soon after Tommy's departure, and before the triumvirate could complete their arrangements for the retreat to Gull's Island, the streets contiguous to Gordon Barclay's house and the streets in the neighborhood began to fill with men and women who looked like the dregs of the city.

But it was immediately in front of the house that the crowd was thickest and most menacing.

Weapons began to flash.

Then the police tried to disperse the mob, and, after hard fighting and the breaking of many heads, were overpowered, passed over and swept aside. Then the crowd began to swarm over the tall iron gates and the spiked iron fence.

There was a fountain—a bronze youth, arms akimbo, who with puffed cheeks blew a fine spray of water. Him certain stray violent men pried from his base, and used, swinging him by the feet and arms, to batter down the solid, heavy front door of the house.

This done, the leaders rushed in, and for a moment were halted by the uncompromising dignity and grandeur of the hall. Facing them was a flight of marble steps. At the top of these stood Gordon Barclay. When the crowd recognized him they yelled like a pack of wolves. The corners of his mouth twitched with a kind of glassy contempt. He turned slowly and passed through a doorway that was just behind him, slammed the door shut and locked it. Not till then did he show a sign of fear or haste. Now, however, he ran swiftly through the library, out at the other end, and down a back stair to the service courtyard. Here, headed for tall wooden gates in a tall brick wall over which wisteria was festooned, stood a powerful limousine car. The engine was purring. On the box sat two brave and handsome young men of the Barclay livery. In the body of the car sat Semmes and Sturtevant. Sturtevant looked furiously angry. Semmes looked seasick.

Meanwhile the bronze boy of the fountain came up the front stair, battered head first, and was used to ram down the door behind which Barclay had been seen to disappear.

The first man to enter the long, rich library was Gunsdorf. He gave only a glance at the open panel which disclosed the inviting interior of a safe, or at the greenbacks and yellowbacks of all denominations which the wily financier had scattered about the room, on tables, on chairs, on the floor—such things were for children.

Raging for his comrades to follow him, Gunsdorf rushed the length of the room, found the back stair down which Barclay had retreated, and came in less time than it takes to tell it to the service court at the back of the house.

But nobody followed Gunsdorf. The open safe, the scattered bills, stopped men as a solid cliff might have done. Vengeance was forgotten, and the crowd began to loot.

When Gunsdorf reached the courtyard the gates were half open. On strong steel brackets fixed to the back of the car were two spare rims, with inflated tires. These formed a resting place for Gunsdorf's feet and a grip for his hands. But the first forward leap of the car, followed by a hair-raising swerve to the left, almost threw him off.

Shots were fired. The car went over something soft that screamed, and that remained in the street after the car had passed and thwacked like a newly landed fish.

Gunsdorf stood upon the spare tires and clung to them and the lights of New York whirled by.

The scene of the riot was far behind. Up Fifth avenue the car raced. It was that hour before dark when the summer traffic was light, and the face of the great Gordon Barclay at the window of the car was enough to make even the boldest traffic cop think twice.

Through Central park, out Seventh avenue, across McComb's dam bridge, up Jerome avenue, through Fordham to the Pelham parkway, into New Rochelle and out, through Mamaroneck, Rye, Portchester, the car flew. And like grim death, his purpose never swerving, Gunsdorf clung to the spare tires. His feat was worthy of a better. Vengeance is no man's. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord."

The old fishing town of Giddings was dark as sin. The financiers, conferring, had determined to make this, rather than Missaquid, their point of departure. They would be to late to catch the last boat for Bartell's. Giddings, with Missaquid, formed the base of a triangle, of which Gull Island was the apex. Therefore, if they could here charter some craft to convey them to the island, there would be a great saving of time.

The car ran half way through the little town, turned a right angle and descended to the wharves, and here, in the darkness, stopped. Gunsdorf was the first to alight. He slipped into the shelter of a shed that smelled of fish and flung himself to the ground.

Why didn't he shoot down the financiers as they alighted from the car? His hands were so cramped from gripping the tires he could not have held or pointed a gun; they were shaking like leaves of poplar trees in a wind. He was in acute physical pain.

But, lying on the ground, writhing with exhaustion, he began to recover little by little from the ordeal through which he had passed, and he was able to keep an eye on the car and on the shadowy men whom he hated, and to listen to what they had to say to each other and to the fisherman whom they routed from his bed, and who finally, for a prodigious sum of money, consented to venture out in the easterly storm that was brewing and carry them and their luggage to Gull Island.

The name of his little schooner was the Mary Nye. She was at the end of the long wharf, half unloaded. No, he had given up fishing. There was more money in coasting. They could start at once; he would have to get his crew together—two men and a boy. Had they really come all the way from New York? They must be hard set. Better come to the house. He'd rout the misses out of bed, and she'd give them coffee.

Barclay gave some orders to his driver, and much money; also he gave much money to the other man on the box, and he shook hands with them both and thanked them for their devotion to them, and told them that their future would be his care.

Then the car went one way, and the financiers and the fisherman went another, and presently Gunsdorf doubled half over, like a man crippled with rheumatism, rose from his hiding place, and hobbled off in a third.

dirty little ship. Amidship was a hold, formerly used as a container for codfish; it still smelled of them. The hatchway giving access to this hold was open, and into it Gunsdorf descended. It seemed to him, after exploring the schooner from stern to stem, to offer the best means of concealment. The little cabin aft was cleaner. It would be the choice of the triumvirate for their own quarters.

Gunsdorf was half crazy with fatigue. In a far corner of the hold he found a pile of sacking and flung himself down on them. But there was something hard among them that hurt him. He groped for this, and found that it was a powerful two-handed augur, fixed with an inch and a half bit.

He pushed it to one side and in a moment was sound asleep.

Barclay was restless; the cabin was stuffy and verminous; he preferred the deck and the open air. So it happened that in passing the main hatch, in a lull of the wind, he heard a sound of a man snoring. He had left Semmes and Sturtevant complaining of the discomforts of the cabin. Captain Nye was at the wheel, the two men and the boy forward.

He strolled aft.

"There's someone asleep in the main hold," he said.

"The hell there is!"

"Well, let him snore."

Gradually it dawned upon Barclay that the presence on the schooner of a man unknown and unvouched for was not pleasant. So he descended into the hold, struck a match, and had a look at the sleeper's face.

Then very softly he returned to the deck, half closed the hatch, and, thrusting his head through the opening that remained, he called loudly: "Wake up, there!"

The snores ceased and were followed by a kind of sleepy groaning.

"Gunsdorf," called Barclay in a sharp, incisive voice, "can you hear me?"

"I hear you."

"What are you doing on this boat?"

No answer.

"Well, you'll not be able to do any mischief. You seem to like it down there. I am going to close this hatch so that you can't open it. You will not get out until the boat is back of her starting point. The captain is a safe man. You will not find out from him where I have been set ashore. So good-night to you."

Gunsdorf's answer was to fire two wild shots from his automatic. Barclay slammed the hatch to and succeeded in fastening it so that it could not be opened from below.

Then he went once more to the captain and talked to him for some time in an undertone. After that he waked Sturtevant and Semmes to tell them what had happened.

"He's been insane for some time," said Sturtevant. "He wouldn't stop at anything. I hope to God he hasn't got a stick of dynamite with him. He'd think nothing of blowing himself to pieces if we went, too."

Gunsdorf had no stick of dynamite. He had only an automatic with a few cartridges in the magazine, and an insane, murderous rage and hatred in his breast.

So they'd land somewhere, would they? He'd be carried back to the starting point, would he? Not if he knew it. His ride on the back of the automobile was all in vain, was it? He'd show 'em—damn em!

And his hands, their strength refreshed by hatred, insanity and suicidal daring, sought and found the big auger and began to bore a hole through the bottom of the schooner. He would drown, but so would they!

After a time the edge of the hole he was boring became damp, water began to trickle from the bit, then to spit and hiss, then the bit went clear through, and when he had withdrawn it water spouted upward as from a garden hose.

Gunsdorf laughed aloud, and at once began to bore a second hole. When he had nearly finished a third the bit broke short off, and Gunsdorf cursed. But the Mary Nye was taking in a good deal of water, and the failure of the bit only seemed to have postponed the time when the sea should close over her.

But in the book of fate the Mary Nye was not destined to perish by water alone. Among her heterogeneous coastwise cargo which had not been unloaded, from the small hold back of the main hold, were two sacks of unslaked lime. After a time a trickle of water found its way to these, and they began to smoke.

The first person to be aware of the smoke was Gunsdorf. It filtered into the main hold before it found its way to the deck. Gunsdorf at the moment, with a kind of diabolical eagerness, was trying to calculate the rapidity with which the water was rising. This was a difficult matter, owing to the motion of the vessel.

When he smelled the smoke his heart almost stopped beating, he was frightened. Water and dynamite had no terror for him, but death by fire had always been his nightmare. He was like a man waking after a great drunkenness, during which, let us say, he has committed some crime which his frenzied brain at the time of its commission had seemed a reasonable and even a meritorious thing to do, but the memory of which makes the same brain, the fumes of alcohol gone, a prey to the most awful terror and remorse.

In short, the man had recovered from his murderous and suicidal madness. He was sane—a rational creature, who realized what he had done, and that the deed was in vain, and that he alone would be destroyed by it.

What madness to suppose that such a man as Barclay would stay by the Mary Nye till she went down? She carried a boat for just such an emergency. But he, Gunsdorf, while the others rowed merrily off, would be left in the dark.

In the first moment of reasoning it did not occur to him that the ship was on fire. Rather he thought that the smoke was some devilish device of the triumvirate to asphyxiate him.

From the eastern cliffs, which received the onslaught of the open sea, Tommy and Celestia walked to those lower western cliffs whose feet are washed by the less strenuous waters which flow between Gull Island and the mainland, and here, sheltered from the wind, they seated themselves, ostensibly to admire the view, but really to admire each other.

The view consisted of gray water, a vast expanse of it, in commotion, and of a vast expanse of small gray sky; and, many miles distant, a small schooner beating slowly up to the island.

"By George you are right!" said Tommy. Then, a moment later, with excitement: "She's on fire. That's why the davits are swung outboard. They are waiting till the last moment to lower a boat. Thank the Lord they've got one! I suppose they want to get into the lee of the island. It must be pretty rough out there for a skiff. They're not making much headway, though. She looks very low in the water. Probably leaks like a sieve, and the fire keeps them from getting to the pumps."

"Can't we do anything to help?"

"Not unless the launch has come back from Bartells. She went over early for newspapers and supplies. Let's go see."

So they raced off to the landing. The launch had not yet returned, and there was neither sight nor sound of her. A catboat without even a mast was drawn up on ways, and the only other craft at the landing was a flat-bottomed skiff, so low in the water that she could not have lived in the rough water outside of the harbor.

They stopped at the house for field glasses, of which there were several pairs in a drawer of the hall table, and hurried back to the western cliffs.

In his explorations of the night before Gunsdorf had noted the sacks of lime raised from the floor of the hold to keep them from any chance water. And it dawned upon him it was his own fault that they had got wet, and generated enough heat to set the ship on fire.

Captain Nye had kept his courage up, and held grimly to the task of trying to make head against the fire and against the water rising in the hold.

Through what remained of the night, and through all the long, anxious morning, he and his two men, aided by Barclay, Semmes and Sturtevant, had fought like heroes against the fire and water.

It was discouraging to have to cart into the burning after-hold so much of the water that they blistered their hands pumping it out of it. At one time it looked as if they were going to get the fire under control. In that event they could have kept the vessel afloat indefinitely.

Captain Nye had suggested bringing Gunsdort on deck and putting him to work, and the effort had been made. The man was disarmed as he came up, wet to the knees and choking with smoke. But at the sight of Barclay all his hate returned. He would not work; they couldn't make him.

"Why the hell should I," said he, "when I took the trouble to bore the holes that are sinking her and to start the fire that's burning her?"

All regarded the man with a horror that was akin to awe. Anger succeeded this.

"Is that the truth?" asked Captain Nye?"

"Yes."

Captain Nye motioned to his two men. They seized Gunsdorf, and after a short struggle cast him back into his prison and battened down the hatch.

It was only the fatigue of those who were trying to save her that eventually settled the fate of the Mary Nye. Her captain called the party together.

"Thanks, all hands," he said. "You've done all men could do. We'll need what strength we've got left to get us ashore. So let her burn."

The boy, who had been at the wheel ever since the discovery of the fire, was relieved by Captain Nye. The boy promptly lay down on the deck, and the others followed suit, resting themselves against the time of embarking in the small boat.

At last the moment came when Captain Nye thought best to abandon his ship. His eyes filled with tears.

"Don't grieve, captain," said Barclay; "I'll pay you her value five times over. You're a good man."

As they were about to step into the boat that bumped alongside, but little below the level of the sinking deck, Barclay said curtly: "I can't leave Gunsdorf to die like that."

He himself unfastened the hatch. Gunsdorf had climbed up the ladder to keep out of water as long as possible. He was more dead than alive. They had to lift him into the boat.

She rode very low in the water and rolled precariously when she had drifted out of the lea of the doomed schooner, and when she hit the rough water she rolled quietly over and floated bottom up.

The shock of the cold water revived Gunsdorf so that he did not at once drown. He succeeded in getting hold of the boat and keeping his head out of water.

Over the inverted bows Barclay crawled out of the water and lay sprawling on the arched, slippery bottom of the boat. From this advantageous position he looked about eagerly to see whom he could help. Of that whole party only Barclay and the boy could swim. Sturtevant and Semmes, if they ever came to the surface, were never seen again by mortal eyes. The boy swam to the boat and climbed up on it, with Barclay's help.

Then for the first time Barclay saw the agonized face of Gunsdorf. The man's grip was failing, and he knew it. At a little distance Captain Nye floated face down. His two men came to the surface, came together, clinched and died, each trying to use the other as a ladder by which to climb out of the water.

Barclay looked for a while coldly into Gunsdorf's face, and then looked away.

"For Christ's sake!"

Then the little boy, his teeth chattering, said:

"'Tain't pretty to see men drown," and began to blubber.

With an oath Barclay reached for Gunsdorf and tried to draw him out of the water. It was a difficult and precarious operation.

There was a strange look in Gunsdorf's face. It was no longer hatred. There was hope in it; but, more than that, there was something that was akin to love. A miracle had been wrought in the evil man's heart.

"You're a good man," he said. "I thought you were the devil."

"My man," said Barclay, "I can't get you up here. I'm sorry. My strength is petered out. If it's any comfort to you, I forgive you for what you have done. I've done plenty of evil, too. I guess we both thought we were trying to do good. We looked at life from different angles. You didn't believe that men like me were human beings; I had the same feeling about men like you. I guess that's mostly what's the matter with this world, anyway."

Holding tightly to Gunsdorf's hand, he still managed to keep the anarchist's head out of water.

All this Tommy and Celestia saw from the top of the cliffs. They had recognized the two chief actors in the drama, and Tommy's suspense over the fate of the man who had been good to him was awful to see. It was that white, quiet suspense that transcends all outcry and lamentation.

"Gunsdorf," said Barclay, "I'm slipping; I can't hold you any longer. I'm sorry."

"My God!" exclaimed Barclay. "What sand!"

The moment Gunsdorf's head reappeared Barclay slipped quietly into the water and tried to save him. But Gunsdorf had gone down open-mouth. He was too confused to understand the calm, steadying command of Barclay—to keep his head—to keep still.

He tried to climb upon his would-be savior, and they went down together. Then Barclay's presence of mind left him, and he, too, grappled.

And so they died—in each other's arms.

Glenn Hall, as Bruce Vernon, the artist-tenor of "The Lady in Red," the Chicago record holding musical attraction, which plays at the Majestic Wednesday evening, claims Elk Falls, Kansas, as his birthplace, but admits that the town is one not even included in the official map of the state, and that a few years ago he motored over the entire state without being able to locate the hamlet. When he was 3 years of age his parents moved to Chicago. As a boy he was a treble soloist in the choir of a Chicago church, and later sang in choirs in other western cities, which pursuit eventually brought him into concert work. He abandoned this to enter the medical school of the University of Chicago to obtain a physician's degree, with the intention of succeeding to the practice of his father. While at college he sang at chapel and was a member of the Glee club, and before he realized it his singing was of so much importance that he could not give it up. He abandoned all idea of a career in medicine and went abroad to study music. He sang extensively in Europe, appearing in concerts in Berlin, Vienna, Paris and London. He was the first American to sing at the Gewandhays in Leipsic. Upon his return to America, Mr. Hall joined the Metropolitan Grand Opera company in New York, remaining with that organization for two years. He then made another trip to Europe and studied in Florence, under Lombardi, who was Caruso's teacher. While in Italy he received a contract calling for his services with the Chicago Grand Opera company. Upon his arrival in New York he was approached by Victor Herbert with the request that he sing the tenor role in "The Madcap Duchess," and through Mr. Herbert's efforts he secured a release from the opera company and began his career in light opera. "The Lady in Red" is an operetta in which Mr. Hall's voice is heard to brilliant advantage.

"THE BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE."

This Coming Week Temple Players Will Launch Winter Season.

With the coming week the Temple theater players will launch the regular winter season, presenting as a debut offering the powerful drama of truth, "The Blindness of Virtue," Cosmo Hamilton's striking sermon on the fallacy of denying children parental instruction in sex hygiene during the period of adolescence. No more thoroughly enthralling drama on the peril of prudery between father and son and mother and daughter ever has been written than Mr. Hamilton has penned in "The Blindness of Virtue." It is intended particularly as a warning against the danger of permitting young girls to remain in ignorance of the possible results of yielding to their natural impulses. A young girl, a daughter of an English vicar, is found by her father under compromising circumstances with a young man sent to study under the vicar. The father wrongly accuses the girl, who demands to know what he means. She had been kept in total ignorance of sex and the father realized the danger to which he had subjected his girl, danger which might have resulted as it did for Mary Ann, the girl who had answered the lure of London town and had crept home broken hearted to her stricken mother.

This evening will mark the closing of the week's run of the comedy hit, "The Wrong Mr. Wright," in which the Temple players have scored almost as emphatically as in the farce, "Hello Bill." With the closing of this show the players will start on the regular season. The only change in prices will be for the orchestra seats, which will be fifty cents at the evening performance and twenty-five cents for the matinees.

Rome liked burlesque, and the oriental dance was a favorite with all the rulers. Rome was a proud and prosperous nation. She boasted of some of the greatest men that have ever lived.

Did you ever stop to think that the oriental dance originated in the bible, and is the portrayal of physical beauty and art? Burlesque is exactly what it means. It is a burlesque on the things of life.

The Monte Carlo Girls is a burlesque of today. It is full of humor from start to finish. Things of life as they should be, and as they are seen by some are always funny. This is the feature of the Monte Carlo Girls.

The Monte Carlo Girls play at the Empress this evening. They are attracting a great deal of attention. Harry Welsh and Kyra are both stars. They are among the very best in their field. Welsh is great, and Kyra is a wonder, there's no use denying that. The play is full of humor from the start, and has "just lots" of singing and dancing.

At Jefferson With "Romance of Elaine" and Keystone Comedy.

Romance, pathos and tragedy commingle in this stirring five-part Mutual masterpiece, "Milestones of Life," which stars the piquant Thanhouser star, Mignon Anderson, together with a notable cast of other well known actors including Louise Rutter, a famous stage beauty, and Helen Badgely, the wonderful Thanhouser child actress. A play of the seasons, it portrays in magnificent scenes what befalls a man and a woman in their journey through life from spring to autumn—happy in each other's love until the tragedy came that blackened their happiness—ending with their reconciliation in the winter of their joys and sorrows—life's last milestone.

The final chapter of "The Romance of Elaine" will be shown today and the identity of the mysterious Mr. X will be established. The last attraction will be one of the inimitable Keystone comedies, "Lover's Lost Control," featuring Syd Chaplin and a notable group of Associate Keystoners.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 28.—Low wages was found to be the basic cause of industrial unrest in the report which Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the federal commission on industrial relations, and the labor members of that body, will present to congress as a result of the commission's two-year investigation into the subject.

The report embodying the personal findings of Mr. Walsh and concurred in by Commissioners John B. Lennon, James O'Connell and Austin B. Garretson was made public here today.

"The workers of the nation, through compulsory and oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil," it was declared in the report and the resulting industrial dissatisfaction was said to have reached "proportions that already menace the social good will, and the peace of the nation."

Workers Responsible.

The report in part follows: "We find the basic cause of industrial dissatisfaction to be the low wages, or stated in another way, the fact that the workers of the nation through compulsory and oppressive methods legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil.

"We further find that unrest among the workers in industry has grown to proportions that already menace the social good will and the peace of the nation. Citizens numbering millions smart under a sense of injustice and oppression. The extent and depth of industrial unrest can hardly be exaggerated. State and national conventions of labor organizations numbering many thousands of members have cheered the names of leaders imprisoned for participation in a campaign of violence conducted as one phase of a conflict with organized employers.

"Employers have created and maintained small private armies and used these forces to intimidate and suppress their striking employes by deporting, imprisoning, assaulting and killing their employes. The spy systems are maintained to discover and forestall the movements of the enemy. The use of state troops in policing strikes has bred a bitter hostility to the military system.

Charges and Countercharges.

"Courts, legislatures and governors have been rightfully accused of serving employers to the defeat of justice, and while counter charges come from employers and their agents with almost negligible exceptions, it is the wage earners who believe, assert and prove that the very institutions of their country have been prevented by the power of the employer.

"To the support of the militant and aggressive propaganda of organized labor has come within recent years a small, but rapidly increasing host of ministers, college professors, writers, journalists and others of the professional classes distinguished in many instances by exceptional talent which they devote to agitation, with no hope of material reward.

"We find the unrest to be but the manifestation of the age long struggle of the race for freedom of opportunity for every individual to live his life to its highest ends. The unrest of the wage earners have been augmented by recent changes and developments in industry. Chief of these are the rapid and universal introduction and extension of machinery by which unskilled workers may be substituted for the skilled and an equally rapid development of rapid transportation and communication by which private capital has been enabled to organize in greater operations. Work formerly done at home or in small neighborhood shops has been transferred to great factories where the individual worker becomes an impersonal element under the control of impersonal corporations. Women in increased numbers have followed their work from the home to the factory and even children have been enlisted.

Where Profits Go.

"Now, more than ever the profits of great industries under centralized control pour into the coffers of stockholders and directors who never have so much as visited the plants, and who perform no service in return. And while vast inherited fortunes, representing zero in social servier to the credit of their possessors, automatically treble and multiply in volume, two-thirds of those employes who work 12 hours a day receive less than enough to support themselves in decency and comfort.

"We find that many entire communities exist under the arbitrary economic control of corporation officials charged with the management of an industry or group of industries and we find that in such communities political liberty does not exist, and its forms are hollow mockery.

"In larger communities where espionage becomes impossible the wage earner who is unsupported by a collective organization may enjoy freedom of expression outside the workshop, but there his freedom ends and it is a freedom more apparent than real. For the house he lives in, the food he eats, the clothing he wears, the enjoyment of his wife and children and his own health and safety are endangered through the arbitrary power in fixing wages and working conditions.

Duty of Citizens.

"The responsibility for the conditions which have been described above we declare, rests primarily upon workers, who, blind to their collective strength and ofttimes deaf to the cries of their followers, have suffered exploitation and the invasion of their most sacred rights without resistance. A large measure of responsibility must however, attach to the great mass of citizens. But, until the workers themselves realize their responsibility and utilize to the full their collective power, no action, whether governmental or altruistic, can work any genuine and lasting improvement.

"We call upon our citizenship, regardless of politics, or economic conditions, to use every means of agitation, all avenues of education and every department and function of government to eliminate the injustices exposed by this commission to the end that each laborer may secure the whole product of his labor."

Improvement Will Be More Rapid When Crops Begin to Move.

Business conditions generally are good throughout the country and will improve as soon as the movement of crops is well under way, according to the monthly letter on trade conditions issued for September by the Old National bank.

The letter says: "The purchasing power of the people of this country is greater today than ever before in history and will be steadily increased each month for the next few months at least. Our financial ability to handle our tremendous crops is a vitally important factor. That our crops will be tremendous is generally conceded and the total farm production will exceed in both quantity and value all previous records. On the other hand corn, oats and some of the smaller crops will probably fall far short of present estimates but a decline of several per cent from present expectations could not be considered a calamity as even with such reductions our combined crops will be record-breaking."

The letter says that the best business conditions are to be found in the western and Rocky mountain states and the poorest conditions in the southeastern states, in central New York, central Pennsylvania and on the western edge of the Pacific slope.

First National's Letter.

"It is very natural that viewing conditions from a broad standpoint there should be a great deal of optimism regarding the business situation," says the monthly letter just issued by the First National bank. "The United States has for many years had the reputation of being the spendthrift among nations and it is time for us to show the world that if we have been careless in the past we are able to correct this condition and to exercise sensible thrift and economy in the future."

Berlin, Aug. 28. The admiralty today made denial of the official British statement that a German submarine had been sunk this week by a British aviator off the Belgian coast near Ostend. The admiralty also made a report on the attack on Aug. 16 by a German submarine off the English coast. The announcement is as follows:

"One of our submarines on Aug. 16 destroyed by gun fire the Benzol factory with the attached Benzol warehouses and furnaces near Harrington, England. The statement of the British press that the submarine attacked the open towns of Harrington, Parton and Whitehaven is inexact.

"The same submarine on Aug. 15 was fired at from a great distance in the Irish sea by a large passenger steamer, probably a Royal mail steam packet, but was not hit.

"The British admiralty announced on Aug. 27 that a German submarine had been destroyed and sunk off Ostend by a British seaplane. This is inexact. The submarine was attacked, but not hit, and returned to port undamaged."

The British statement referred to by the German admiralty was made on Aug. 26. It stated that Squadron Commander Arthur Bigsworth had destroyed singlehanded a German submarine off Ostend. The announcement contained these words: "The submarine was observed to be completely wrecked, and sank off Ostend."

Paris, Aug. 28.—Resumption of hostilities between the Austrians and Montenegrins is announced in an official statement given out here today by the Montenegrin consul general. The statement filed in Cettinje on Aug. 26 and delayed in transmission is as follows: "A lively engagement occurred yesterday near the mouth of the gulf of Cattaro (in Dalmatia near the Montenegrin border) between outposts and rather strong detachments of Austrians. The fight lasted two hours. The Austrians retired, leaving numerous dead on the field. Ten prisoners remained in our hands.

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 28.—That Germany was the victim of a wrong system of education was the declaration made by John Mez, of Munich, Germany, at the closing session here last night of the National Education association. "Internationalism" was the subject of his address. He said in part:

"Those in my country who made war meant it for the world's gain. They did not mean to destroy. They are the victims of a wrong system of education. They have been taught nothing beyond an irrational conception of militarism.

"Everyone who lives in the United States and loves civilization and humanity should be grateful to the man who has kept America out of the war. Education in internationalism means educating the old men first to change the ideal that collective homicide is the proper thing.

"The first duty of a man is to defend his country, but not to attack any other country.

"The most gratifying sight in the world is the spectacle of the college presidents of the country talking peace, for education is the one great agency which will wipe out the stupidity of militarism."

David Bancroft Johnson, president of Winthrop Normal and Industrial college, Rockhill, S. C., the new president of the National Education association, reviewed the history of the organization and declared that the convention was the greatest in its record.

Two new members were initiated and three applications were received at the meeting of Wayne circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. The circle will be represented at the national encampment at Washington by Mrs. Alice Sink.

Paris, Aug. 28.—German aeroplanes attempted to make a raid on Paris this morning. They were attacked by a French air flotilla and one of the German machines was shot to pieces in midair.

The German machines crossed the French lines flying at a great height and driving toward the city of Paris. When over a point to the north of the capital they sighted a French air flotilla, which was waiting for them, and three of the German aeroplanes wheeled about and headed for the German lines.

The Austro-Germans apparently have begun successfully a new effort to drive the Russians out of the small part of eastern Galicia remaining to them. Berlin today reports that attacks on the lines along the Zlota-Lipa river resulted in the Russian lines being pierced north and south of Brzezany. The Russians are retreating and being pursued.

In the eastward drive of Gen. von Eichhorn's troops, the town of Narew about twenty miles east of the Bialystok-Bielsk line, has been occupied. German cavalry is active on the Russian left flank, southeast of Brest-Litovsk, where a success of this branch of the army in the pursuit of the Russians is reported.

In the Baltic provinces successes for the Germans in battles north of Bausk and Schoenburg, with the capture of more than 2,000 prisoners and some artillery, are claimed.

An attempted German air raid on Paris was frustrated by a French air flotilla, dispatches from Paris state. One machine of the four in the German air raiding force was brought down by bullets and fell flaming into a forest. Both aviators in it were burned to death. The other three machines escaped, after one had dropped five bombs on Montmorency, fifteen miles from Paris.

Only bomb fighting and artillery engagements on the front in France are reported by Paris. Another railroad station behind the German lines has been bombarded.

There has been little if any change in the situation on the Gallipoli peninsula in the Dardanelles, so far as the latest Turkish official report indicates.

MARIETTA ROUNDS UP UNDESIRABLES

Marietta, Ga., Aug. 28.—Eight men who did not give satisfactory explanations of their presence here were rounded up late last night, placed in a box car on a freight train and sent away. The car was guarded safely until the train left the town limits. Since Leo M. Frank was lynched near here August 17, several persons, whose business in the town was not known, have been invited to leave. Five men were ordered away yesterday and today could not be found.

These events and the continued receipt of letters threatening various acts of vengeance for Frank's lynching caused police officials here to increase the number of officers by fifteen today. Letters are being received from all parts of the country by town and Cobb county officials and by persons who have given statements on the Frank case to newspapers outside the state.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 28.—Twelve Canadian battalions of infantry are to be placed in England for final training, according to announcement made today by the military authorities. The troops will be regarded as reinforcements to be called for service in France and Flanders as required.

This draft will bring the number of men Canada has sent to England up to 100,000.

Rudisill Boulevard Surely Needs Some Kind of Improvement

Rudisill boulevard, extending across the entire south side of the city, has been the source of much discussion in municipal circles, with the final discovery several days ago that the property along the thoroughfare, from Calhoun street to Broadway, is assessed at about ten per cent. of its value. When the park board sought to take steps to pave the boulevard it was discovered that the appraised valuation of the abutting property would not permit the improvement. Rudisill boulevard is the worst road in the city limits. The center picture shows the eight and ten inch mud holes that make it up, and the top and bottom pictures the roadway's relation to the sidewalk. The road is marked by arrows and the walks by crosses. There is a drop of three feet and a slight twist of a wheel would throw an automobile over the road to the sidewalk. But there is little danger of that occuring—no automobiles are seen on the boulevard; they can't get through. The board of park commissioners is working hard to find a way to pave the street and has not yet given up hope.

BIG CELEBRATION AT HARMAR SCHOOL

By the initiative and under the leadership of Councilman A. H. Keller, of the Eighth ward, and Councilman-at-Large Jacob Hartman, who resides in that ward, plans are under way for an elaborate and formal dedication of the new Harmar school building at Washington, Harmar and Jefferson streets. The building will be completed in time for the opening of the public schools, Tuesday, September 7, and it is purposed that some evening of that week shall be chosen for the celebration.

Councilmen Keller and Hartman have the co-opeeration of the city school board and the municipal administration has been asked to take part in the ceremony. The Harmar school is the newest and finest of the grade schools in Fort Wayne and the people of the Eighth ward, in which it is situated, are to a high degree proud of it. They want the opening of the building to public service signalized by an event commensurate with its beauty and importance.

Details of the program have not yet been worked out. It is planned, however, to have a program of speeches and music and to illuminate the building and throw it open for public inspection. The park board has agreed to transfer to the school building for this occasion one of the postponed park concerts by the Elks' band and Prof. William Miles, superintendent of musical instruction in the public schools, will be asked to drill the pupils of the Harmar school in choral work that they may sing one or two of the national hymns at the dedication.

The system of ornamental lights placed on the circular curb that surrounds the school grounds on three sides will have been completed by the time of the celebration and the lights will be turned on for that night.

The plans under contemplation will probably bring together one of the greatest crowds that has ever attended a similar function in the state. Councilmen Keller and Hartman and the school authorities expect to be able to announce a definite program next week.

Forty applicants for teachers' licenses took the examination held Saturday in one of the vacant court rooms on the third floor of the court house. It was the last chance teachers had of getting a license before the opening of school. Another examination will be held in October, at which time all teachers residing outside of the state who did not have an opportunity of taking an examination before will be privileged to take this one.

Gary, Ind., Aug. 28.—Joseph Kramer, a powder-maker, interrogated by the police today in connection with their investigation of the murder of the German pastor, Rev. Edmund Kayser, whose body was found near the parsonage in Tolleston last Tuesday night, said two men, one of whom "looked like Kayser," recently approached him with a proposition to blow up the Aetna powder works, where he is employed.

He said he reached an agreement with the two under which he was to get $1,500 for destroying the Aetna plant, but that later he decided to tell the police instead.

Other Developments.

The arrest of Thomas Modjesch, an inspector at the Gary steel mills, and a statement by State's Attorney Clyde Hunter that Kayser was slain by his own revolver as a result of a quarrel over business matters with persons who called upon him the night of his murder, furnished other developments in the case.

Statements made to Chief of Police Heintz by Attorney Paul J. Tomanoczy, with offices in Chicago and Gary, and who was reported to have talked with Kayser an hour before his body was found by a passerby, resulted in the arrest of Modjesch, who was held pending an examination. The nature of the information leading up to the arrest of Modjesch was guarded by Chief Heintz, who said that he merely wished to question the former.

E. W. Andre, president of the German alliance, of Hammond, Ind., asserted that as a result of his investigation he had come to the conclusion that Kayser was murdered by a sympathizer of the allies, because of the pastor's alleged denunciation of England, Russia and France. Andre stated that Kayser had repeatedly said that he feared his life was in danger as a result of his utterances.

ALLEN COUNTY IS TO HAVE BOOTH AT FAIR

While Allen county will have no agricultural display at the state fair at Indianapolis on September 6 to 10, there will be a booth containing charts showing in detail the work of the county agent during the past year. C. Henry is now busy preparing these charts and will take the same to Indianapolis and decorate the booth to suit himself.

Mr. Henry was the principal speaker Friday evening at a meeting of the Adams Township Farmers' club, held in the Center school. He spoke on wheat production.

BOY IS STRUCK BY AN INTERURBAN CAR

while riding his bicycle on Broadway, about 6 o'clock, Friday evening, Elmer Weitzmann, 13 years old, son of Mrs. Helen E. Weitzmann, a widow woman, living at 1329 Taylor street, was struck by an incoming interurban car and thrown to the pavement with terrific force. He was not seriously injured, however.

Weitzmann attempted to pass the car and did not turn far enough out to avoid being struck. The bicycle was badly damaged. The car was in charge of Motorman J. Armstrong and Conductor Shidler.

INTERNED GERMANS RAID FARMER CAREY'S MELONS.

Norfolk, Va., Aug 82.—Farmer Carey, of the Deep Creek section, complained today to the commander o fthe interned German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich that three separate invasions of his watermelon patch by men of the Eitel Friedrich crew had caused him $200 damages. The German commander agreed to having the damage estimated by an umpire and promised payment. The farmer said his loss was so great because the Eitel's sailors carved up many green melons to learn if they were ripe.

That Charles R. Lane will have opposition for the republican congressional nomination is the word that has drifted in from Columbia City. Within a few days it is expected that W. W. Williamson will announce his candidacy.

Some days ago, so the story goes, a delegation of Lagrange county republicans made a visit to Columbia City soliciting the support for a favorite son whom they intended to bring out. The Lagrange contingent was informed that Columbia City would have a candidate in the person of W. W. Williamson, editor of the Columbia City Commercial-Mail. Report has it that this met with the favor of the Lagrange men and they thereupon decided to drop their man and support the Columbia City editor.

Mr. Lane has received many letters from all parts of the Twelfth district promising him support. Republican leaders feel confident of success this year and for this reason friends of Mr. Lane are urging that he be nominated without opposition in view of the sacrifices he has made on previous occasions when there was not the least chance in the world for a republican to win.

But the Columbia City Post, a democratic organ, does not take this view and has taken the liberty to give Mr. Lane the following bit of advice: "To be perfectly candid with Charles, the Post will say that it would be for his own good if the voters in his party would knock the spots off him at the primary, for it will avail him nothing to spend his good money and orate over the district for three months or more next year." His friends, however, take a different view. They feel confident that in the event of his nomination he will be elected.

Evangelist "Billy" Sunday is coming to Fort Wayne next Monday to address the employes of the Bowser works, and President S. F. Bowser today announced that the public was very welcome to join the throng and hear the noted gospel campaigner.

With Mr. Sunday will be Mr. and Mrs. Loren Jones, singer and pianist with Dr. Lyon's evangelistic party in Fort Wayne last winter. It is expected that a large audience in addition to the army of Bowser employes will embrace this opportunity to hear both the evangelist and the singer.

Orders were issued Friday by Trustee Henry P. Scherer at all hospitals prohibiting them from accepting patients sent here from a distance to be cared for at Wayne township's expense. Nearby towns impose on Fort Wayne, according to Trustee Scherer. "We have enough of our own to care for without being burdened with those from outside." Trustee Scherer declared. The trustee's order was the result of his discovery of a patient being sent here from Montpelier, Ohio. He was accepted at the hospital and had been there two or three days before the trustee was aware of his presence.

Appeal Militia Case from Warsaw Decision

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Whether a military court or the civil courts have jurisdiction over the Indiana National Guard was today before the state supreme court for decision, an appeal from the ruling of Acting Judge A. G. Wood, of the circuit court, which gave the power to the civil courts having been taken here late last night.

The case will be made a test because of its importance in maintaining the discipline of the militia.

George Mowery, of Company H of the Indiana National Guard, of this city, was sentenced to eight days in jail for wilful disobedience in refusing to attend the camp of instructions at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Judge Wood last night granted a writ of habeas corpus upsetting the ruling of the military court and placing the civil court over the national guard court. He then granted the appeal to the state supreme court.

WORRY IS TELLING ON BERNSTORFF.

WAS GRANDSON OF FT. WAYNE PIONEER

A. F. Leonhardt, of New Orleans, Dies Suddenly in Denver

A. F. Leonhardt, former postmaster at New Orleans, president of the board of trade there and long active in grain trade circles of the south, who died suddenly in Denver a few days ago, was a grandson of Christian Heinrich Odendahl, a Fort Wayne pioneer who will be well remembered by older citizens here. Miss Henrietta Odendahl, of this city, is an aunt of the deceased. Concerning the death of Mr. Leonhardt, the New Orleans Picayune says:

"A. F. Leonhardt, former postmaster and prominent in grain and board of trade circles, died at the Albany hotel in Denver, Colo., at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mr. Leonhardt, accompanied by his wife, was on a western trip undertaken to recover his health following a recent severe illness.

"A few weeks ago Mr. Leonhardt was stricken with acute indigestion while riding home in a Prytania car. For several days he hovered between life and death, but gradually came around and apparently recovered. In order to completely regain health, however, he left last Wednesday night for a trip through the Rocky mountains, planning to visit the San Francisco exposition. Mrs. Leonhardt accompanied him. They spent two days in St. Louis, visiting Mr. Leonhardt's brother, Robert Leonhardt, and then went to Denver, where they arrived Sunday. Sunday night Mr. Leonhardt became ill and he died shortly after the noon hour Monday.

"Mr. Leonhardt was 55 years of age, and thirty-five years a resident of New Orleans. He was born in St. Louis, Mo. For many years he was connected with the firm of Glover and Odendahl in the grain business. When this firm retired about ten years ago he went into business for himself and remained actively in it until his death. He was president of the New Orleans board of trade and a director of that institution. He was postmaster of New Orleans for three years, being appointed by President Taft. Joseph Voegtle, appointed by President Wilson, succeeded Mr. Leonhardt. Mr. Leonhardt was the representative of the board of trade on the civil service board of the dock board.

"Mr. Leonhardt was twice married. By his first wife, who died in 1905, he had three children, Alexander Leonhardt, who is with the firm of Westfeldt Brothers, New Orleans; Mrs. Maurice L. Warner, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Frank E. Mahoney, of Chattanooga, all of whom are living. The son, Alexander Leonhardt, was visiting his sister in Chattanooga at the time of the father's death. Mr. Leonhardt's second marriage was to Mrs. Marion Hill Dodge, of Baltimore, about six years ago.

"Due announcement will be made of the funeral after arrival of the body from Denver.

"Mrs. Warner, Mrs. Mahoney and Alexander Leonhardt are on their way to New Orleans to attend the funeral of their father."

Mrs. Leonhardt Will Leave with the Body for New Orleans.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 28.—Alex Frederick Leonhardt, former postmaster of New Orleans, La., was suddenly stricken by an attack of acute palpitation of the heart shortly after his arrival in Denver at 9 o'clock last evening and died at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in his rooms at the Albany hotel.

With him at the time was Mrs. Leonhardt, his wife, who was accompanying him to the Pacific coast expositions. Mrs. Leonhardt tonight is prostrated as a result of her husband's death and is under the care of a physician and nurse.

Two physicians, Drs. C. A. Ellis and A. F. Arnell, were in attendance upon Mr. Leonhardt throughout the attack and everything possible was done for him.

It is thought the attack was caused by the high altitude of Denver, although Mrs. Leonhardt stated that her husband had had a similar attack just four weeks ago tomorrow, before they left New Orleans. Arrangements were made tonight for Mrs. Leonhardt to leave here at 1:50 o'clock tomorrow afternoon over the Union Pacific railroad, via St. Louis, for New Orleans with her husband's body.

U. S. OFFICIALS MUCH ENCOURAGED

Washington, Aug. 28.—Discussion of the case of the Lusitania sunk by a German submarine with the loss of American lives will not be renewed between the United States and Germany pending settlement of the Arabic incident, it was said here today. Although the United States has been notified of Germany's readiness to again take up the Lusitania affair and to offer reparation, the American government will not listen to such a proposal until the situation growing out of the sinking of the Arabic is finally settled. Nothing further on the sinking of the Arabic is looked for from Germany until the submarine commander, who sank the vessel, reports. Through Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, the German government already has announced its intention to offer full satisfaction to the United States for the sinking of the liner. It is well known of course that the United States will not be satisfied unless American lives are paid for and assurances given that similar tragedies will not occur in the future.

While administration officials are much encouraged by the German ambassador's assurances, they will continue to maintain an "open mind" on the sinking of the Arabic until Germany's next communication on the subject is received.

Reiterations by American officials that rights of neutrals will be insisted upon in all quarters is taken by German officials to mean that when it is established that Germany has modified her submarine policy England will be asked to relax her blockade against foodstuffs for Germany. German officials believe the change of their policy will permit an acceptance by the United States of the concessions which Germany will make when negotiations are reopened. The state department now regards its case on the Arabic as made up as far as British and American sources of information are concerned. There now remains only the German presentation to afford the department a basis for final decision.

There was no further conference today between Secretary Lansing and Count Bernstorff, and it is understood the latter probably will not call again at the state department until his government is ready to submit the statement it has promised in regard to the Arabic incident.

LONDON PRESS COMMENT.

London, Aug. 28.—The Daily News in an editorial today hazards the suggestion that the submarine which sank the steamship Arabic, has itself since been sunk and that therefore Germany's disavowal of the action of the underwater boat commander becomes comparatively easy. The editorial continues:

"If it is true that Germany is prepared to abandon or suspend her attacks the United States has won a considerable diplomatic victory. There is not the slightest reason to suppose that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg (German imperial chancellor) sanctioned the attack upon the Arabic or desired to ascertain the relations with America. The sinking of the Arabic may be assumed with some degree of certainty to have been the malignant trick of his opponents, the Tirpitzites, designed quite as much to embarras him as to drive America to action."

The editorial adds: "If this really has been accomplished the president has struck a shrewd blow for peace in other continents than America. If the United States can impose conditions on limitations on Germany's war methods other nations can do the same and Germany's claim to be her own judge in such matters is once and for all shattered."

The Standard in an editorial on the Arabic says there are several reasons for believing Count Bernstorff is not bluffing, but that it is not probable Germany will abandon her "submarine savagery" altogether.

"There would be fierce complaints over the relinquishment of so potent a weapon at American dictation," says the Standard. "For their own satisfaction the Germans will adopt a pose of making import but not vital concessions out of pure friendship for the United States and it is not likely that President Wilson on his part will stand for the strict letter of his demand. The primary reason for the concession is doubtless the conviction that Mr. Wilson's patience is nearly exhausted and that the next step would mean business."

raped, but one was outdistanced by its pursuers and was riddled by bullets. It fell flaming into the forest of Halatte, where the burned bodies of two aviators were found. The fourth machine dropped five bombs at Mont Morency, a town fifteen miles from Paris. No one was hurt. The batteries at Mont Morency opened fire on the aeroplane, but it got away in the haze.

RUSSIAN LINES PIERCED.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Teutonic pressure against the Russians in eastern Galicia has resulted in the piercing of the Russian lines along the Zlota Lipa river, it was officially announced today by German headquarters.

It was also announced that the town of Narew, about twenty miles southeast of Bialystok, had been occupied by the Germans.

Since the Austro-German drive through Galicia in June threw the Russians back upon the line of the Dneister and the Zlota Lipa rivers, late in June, there has been comparative inactivity along this front, so far as the official reports have indicated.

Today's statement from German army headquarters that the Russian lines on the Zlota-Lipa had been broken through, apparently means that the Teutonic forces are renewing their thrusts in Galician territory and have scored a success in the course of an attempt to clear the remainder of that territory of Russian troops, which, if carried to a conclusion, would result in the Russians being forced back into their provinces of Volhynia and Podolia.

DENIAL FROM RUSSIA.

London, Aug. 28. As the Russian armies continue to retreat the foreign and war ministeries at Petrograd deny vigorously that their government has any thought of making a separate peace with the central powers. Special dispatches from Petrograd state that the Russians are on the point of digging themselves in.

Military writers at the Russian capital are of the opinion that the German turning movement in Courland is not likely to threaten Petrograd seriously this autumn, as Field Marshall von Hindenburg apparently has made no progress in his efforts to secure control of the Baltic coast.

The latest news from that region, however, indicates that Germany has not given up the plan for naval co-operation toward this end. Berlin reports that German warships bombarded at two points Dago island, which commands the entrance to the gulf of Finland.

The Russian foreign minister, M. Zazonoff, declares emphatically that there is no disagreement among the allied commanders, and that while a German soldier remains on Russian soil there can be no peace.

The greatest interest is displayed here in reports from Washington of the negotiations between the United States and Germany concerning the Arabic incident. Most of the newspapers consider that President Wilson has won a diplomatic success, the effect of which on the whole question of submarine warfare is certain to be momentous.

Notwithstanding the orders of their leaders, 4,000 more Welsh miners have quit work. The advisability of government control of coal mines is again being discussed here.

Annual Institute Meeting Will Be Held at High School Building.

Teachers of Allen county will meet next Monday in the high school auditorium for a week of strenuous institute work.

"To the live teacher educational meetings are a thing of interest for it is there that he gets inspiration and practical instruction which will assist him to get good results in the school room," declares D. O. McComb, superintendent of the schools of the county. "It is also an occasion when teachers renew old acquaintances and form new ones. The value of institutes is so apparent that any exhortation to attend is hardly necessary."

Unusually able instructors have been secured for the institute this year. Dr. Carolyn E. Geisel, physician, surgeon, educator and philanthropist, is a brilliant speaker. For fifteen years she has given herself up literally body and soul, to the task of showing people how to live healthier and happier lives.

Dr. A. P. Hollis, in charge of the educational extension department of the agricultural college at Fargo, N. D., the other speaker, was for thirteen years vice president of the largest normal school west of the Mississippi river, located in Valley county, North Dakota.

Readings will be given at each session by Mrs. Almedia B. Waltz. Mrs. Waltz is a graduate from the dramatic art department of Valparaiso university, and also a graduate of the Elias Day school of Lyceum art, Chicago. Music throughout the institute will be furnished by the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music.

Teachers are required to be present at every session of the institute if they wish to receive compensation and credit for attending same. The county superintendent asks that they enroll during the forepart of the week. A teacher from each school corporation, outside the city of Fort Wayne, will be appointed to keep a roll of the attendance of the teachers. Teachers are requested to report twice a day to the roll-keeper for Fort Wayne. A roll-keeper for each school building will be appointed to keep a record of all teachers who taught in the same building last year.

The police were called and made four or five arrests. Some of the belligerents made their escape. "Butch" Skelton, a local character, was in the melee.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 28.—James Black, once widely notorious as "Jimmy" Black, pickpocket, gambler, hard drinker, all-round bad man and a desperately vicious character, died at the DeKalb county infirmary and was buried Friday afternoon without funeral services. He had been an inmate of the farm for over twenty years, having been brought there from the Allen county farm. For many years prior to his being in the Allen county farm he was a member of a gang of pickpockets that operated between Chicago and Lima, O., with headquarters at Fort Wayne, the gang being composed mostly of Fort Wayne characters. He was born in Fort Wayne, never married and has been noted all his life as a notorious "bad man." A hard drinker, he was also very quarrelsome, always looking for trouble, and generally finding it. During one of his sprees he became engaged in a quarrel and was struck on the head with an iron bar that paralyzed him on his right side. That happened some forty years ago, and he never recovered from the results of this blow. He was past seventy years of age and for several years immediately after coming to DeKalb county he would be permitted to come to town to see a sister, Mrs. John Knoder, and an old friend, Henry Trentman, but of late years he was so bad and vicious that he was not allowed to go away and was confined in the county farm lockup. He made many attacks on the wurders and also attempted the lives of several of the inmates, and had to be watched all the time.

Huntington, Ind., Aug. 28.—Thad Butler, one of the best known newspaper editors in the state, is lying in a most critical condition at the home of his son, Charles A. Butler, in this city. Besides the family of Charles A. Butler, his daughter, Jean, is in constant attendance. The affiction with which Mr. Butler is affected is hardening of the arteries. His breakdown, however, is general. One week ago last Monday Mr. Butler returned to Huntington from a continued stay at Lake Manitau, near Rochester. Early in the summer a cottage was engaged at the lake, Mr. Butler stating to his friends that he believed a long rest might tend to recuperate him. He returned to Huntington once or twice during the summer, but after going to the lake the last time he became quite ill. Although he refused to remain in bed, his immediate family noted that his condition was not good. As soon as he was able to stand the trip he decided that it might be best for him to return to Huntington. Immediately upon reaching here he took to bed and a physician was summoned.

BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 28.—James Wiswell, the 6-year-old son of Mrs. William Wiswell, had a narrow escape from death Wednesday morning at Geneva while playing around the grist mill. A couple boys had been near the building and one of them, James, went under the cleaning room and climbed on a revolving shaft to ride it. The shaft stuck out only about three feet and before long the lad slid back to the far end where a set screw caught his trousers, twisting and pulling him around the shaft. Fortunately it did not revolve very fast. His companion cried for help and the machinery was stopped. He was taken off the shaft and taken home. The boy's clothes were torn from his body, but the only harm done him were a few bruises.

FOLEY-RUTAN REUNION.

Convoy, O., Aug. 28.—The third annual reunion and picnic of the Foley-Rutan families was held yesterday, August 26, in the John D. Lare grove west of Convoy. The affair was a grand success in every way. The weather was favorable and the best of spirits prevailed in all that were present. The number of those present was eighty-seven. The older folks enjoyed social interminglings. The younger people made merry with foot ball, kite and swings. Then came the customary big dinner to which all did justice. After dinner a musical and literary program was rendered. All the old officers were re-elected.

FACTORY WILL NOT LOCATE.

Lagrange, Ind., Aug. 28.—The A. C. Lucas Electrical Device Co. will not locate in Lagrange after all. It seems the gentlemen who brought their equipment here for the purpose of starting up a factory in the Wade building were not able to meet their part of their agreement and the local committee would not turn over the fund raised here until they did. So many debts were hanging over the Illinois corporation, of which Messrs. Lucas and Wells were a part, that it looked too much like buying a lawsuit to appeal to the Lagrange promoters. They now expect to go to Sturgis instead.

MAY BE FATALLY HURT.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Everette Orn, 21 years old, was seriously, perhaps fatally, hurt near Milford Junction when a team he had been driving trod over his body and pulled a heavy gravel wagon upon him when the young man's feet became entangled in the lines. Orn is in a critical condition at his hame two miles southwest of Milford, where he lives with his widowed mother, Mrs. Jemima Orn. The heavy wagon passed over his body at the hips. Several ribs were broken and his hips dislocated and crushed and he probably received other internal injuries.

MARRIED AT BLUFFTON.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Margaret J. Nash and Kent B. Skiles were united in marriage Friday afternoon in a simple nuptial service at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Skiles. Only a small company of friends and relatives were present. Rev. W. T. Arnold, of the First M. E. church, read the service, employing the ring ceremony, which was very simple and impressive. Following the service the company was served with a wedding luncheon. Following the luncheon the bride and groom left for Fort Wayne to take a train for Chicago.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 28.—Samuel L. McDaniel, a prominent farmer who resides three miles west of Warsaw, had a miraculous escape from death last night when eastbound Pennsylvania train No. 8 crashed into a frail rig in which he was driving, causing McDaniel to be hurled many feet through the air to the roadside. The pilot of the engine struck the rear wheel of the buggy and the buggy box was lifted up and outward, throwing Mr. McDaniel from the vehicle. Aside from severe bruises McDaniel, who is 76 years old, was unhurt.

INSTITUTE BEGINS MONDAY.

Huntington, Ind., Aug. 28.—Next Monday morning Huntington will be host to the teachers of the city and county schools, the occasion being the beginning of five days of institute work for the teachers. The institute will last until Friday afternoon. This is for all teachers of the county. The instructors for the county institute are Otis W. Caldwell, of the biology department of the University of Chicago, William W. Black, of the department of education of Indiana university, and Thomas L. Gibson, of Baltimore, Md. Mr. Gibson will have charge of the music.

ELOPED TO WED; SEEKS DIVORCE.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 28.—Grace Bowers has filed in the circuit court here a complaint for divorce from William Bowers, with whom she eloped to Michigan to be married March 16, last. Bowers is a Huntington man and his wife in her complaint says he deceived her into marrying him by stories of his abundant means. She finds he has no means and says he never has provided her a home and has accused her of infidelity, charging her with illicit relations with members of her own family, including her father. Her home has always been in this county.

ATTACKED BY COPPERHEAD.

Woodburn, Ind., Aug. 28.—George Guiff, of Milan township, had a most unpleasant experience this week with a copperhead snake. He was mowing weeds along the fence when he stepped onto the snake and before he could realize what it was, it had coiled itself and he kicked it off before the poisonous tain of industry, his circus interests, serpeant had bitten him. With the scythe, he killed the snake and after measuring found it to be five feet and seven inches long. There had been evidences of a large snake on the farm but no one had before seen it.

TO CLOSE SHIPSHEWANA HOTEL.

Lagrange, Ind., Aug. 28.—P. J. Thompson and family, who have been conducting the Davis hotel at Shipshewana for the past year or more, will close the house after this week and move to Montpelier, Ohio, where they will locate in the same business. The Thompsons are excellent hotel people and the very best of citizens. Opening of Harrison Hill
Monday, Sept. 6, (Labor Day)

On Monday, September 6th, Labor Day, Harrison Hill, the beautiful new home neighborhood, will be thrown open to the public. By that time the paving of Harrison Boulevard will be completed. With the sidewalks already in, and grass sown on the sides and in the parkway, Harrison Boulevard will begin to look a little like it will be when completed, with massive entrance gates, ornamental lights, trees and shrubbery that are yet to come!

Harrison Boulevard

Harrison Boulevard, the main thoroughfare of Harrison Hill, is the finest residence street in all South Wayne. In width, from building line to building line, it is wider than any other—290 feet; with its two drives, its center and side parkways, it measures 145 feet from one property line to the other—ten feet wider than Forest Park Boulevard.
The lots are large—65 to 75 feet wide and over 200 feet deep, with a building line 75 feet back of the property line.
Harrison Boulevard is now paved with asphaltic concrete, the finest known to modern paving science. The sidewalks are already laid. The improvements to come are massive entrance gates, the four center posts standing 16 feet high, ornamental lighting system, a double row of shade trees and tastefully planted shrubbery.
Harrison Boulevard is intended for homes costing to build $4,500 to $9,000. The minimum is kept by restrictions at $4,000.

Here are the instructions:
Write us a letter, in plain simple language, telling us, in your own words and opinion:
First—Why an investment in a city lot pays better than a savings account. Tell us of an actual example, if possible.
Second—Why you consider Harrison Hill the best place to buy a lot on the payment plan.
Third—Why you would like to live in Harrison Hill.
Come out to Harrison Hill on Labor Day; watch our advertisements appearing from time to time in the Sentinel; you will have plenty to write about.
Send your letter to Hilgeman & Schaaf before Saturday, September 11th. Prize winners will be announced as soon as possible after that date.

Harrison Hill is the very heart of New South Wayne, that fine new residence district to the south of Rudisill Boulevard.
Its location is superb; its eastern boundary is Calhoun Street, the main thoroughfare of the city; to the west lies Fairfield Avenue, the principal automobile route to South Wayne and a street of most lovely homes. On the north Harrison Hill is bounded by Rudisill Boulevard, 100 feet wide, and part of the "round the city" boulevard system.
Harrison Street, of which Harrison Boulevard is a continuation, extends from the southern to the northern city limits, and with only three blocks yet to be paved will furnish direct motor transit to Harrison Hill.
With nine homes already actually started, Harrison Hill has more than a future—it is a NOW proposition.

Take the Car to Harrison Hill

Take Pontiac car, transfer to Calhoun short line and get off at Rudisill Boulevard. Calhoun street is paved ALL the way, Harrison Street all but three blocks, giving easy access to automobiles. Labor Day will not be a sale day at Harrison Hill; merely an opening day, that all Fort Wayne may see what we are doing.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

28 Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

29 And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's.

30 But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

31 But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32 And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him.

33 Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes: and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles.

34 And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again.

35 And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of: and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

Developments of the past few days in the dispute between the United States and Germany over submarine practices in warfare can not fail to be immensely gratifying to every American citizen. Not only is the situation gratifying because of the lessening of a tension most grave in character, but because no victory on the blood-stained fields of this war can compare with the president's victory for humanity and for peace. It has cost no thousands of American citizen-soldier lives and no wealth of treasure that leaves poverty and hardship in its wake.

The imperial German ambassador has conveyed to the American state department the fact that orders have been issued to German naval commanders to attack no merchant ship of a belligerent nation without due warning and consequent opportunity for escape with life by non-combatants. This is the big point for which President Wilson has been contending in his interchange of notes with the warring nations. With rare good sense, with calm firmness, refusing to be stampeded into reckless action and with unfailing respect and courtesy for divergent views, the president has carried his argument to the point where his contentions have been recognized and accepted.

Nor is Germany's yielding of the point which she has contended heretofore to be vital to her interests in the situation forced upon her to be taken as any indication of weakness. The concession carries with it no humiliation and no lowering of either dignity or prestige. Rather, on the other hand, it is the manifestation of an exalted national spirit that first of all desires to be right and to be just and to continue to enjoy the respect of the civilized world. The President's course has been assailed again and again by those who would apply to national affairs the all too prevalent personal proclivity for trouble-hunting. With a different type of man in the white house the United States would have long ago been plunged into the abyss of the world war. Patiently, firmly, calmly, surely, President Wilson has been performing a gigantic task. There is new reason for thankfulness that the right sort of president is in direction of our affairs in these ticklish times.

Down at Evansville just now there are in progress some reform upheavals that look much like the genuine thing, and Mayor Bosse is apparently setting about in earnest to redeem his promise to enforce the liquor laws in the river town. When the movement started by rounding up some of the smaller offenders in the outskirts of the city, there was little excitement. The people preferred to wait until they were "shown." Now that evidence is being piled up against liquor men of prominence, and some of them presumed to be close to the city administration, Evansville is beginning to sit up and take notice.

The Alabama house of delegates has just voted down a bill to submit the question of equal suffrage to a vote of the people of that state, and did it rather vehemently, too, following similar action taken by the Indian legislature last spring. But the "cause" has reached a stage of virility where it rather thrives on that sort of thing, and increasingly hostile opposition only serves to spur its friends to still more forceful efforts. The ballot for women may be delayed somewhat, but it is the one big eventual certainty on the horizon of American politics. Even its most energetic foes are now constrained to admit that fact in confidence, however sturdily they seek to forestall its consummation.

The first complete cure has just been reported from the camp which Allen county has provided at the new county farm, north of the city, for the care of tubercular patients. A young woman has just been discharged from the institution, having made complete recovery under the ministrations of fresh air, proper care and suitable diet. And this is but the beginning of the work of life-saving that will be increasingly benificent as the years go by. Allen county has done no more important work in recent years than the provision for the anti-tuberculosis camp.

The late John Condon, the blind Chicago gambler, who in early days operated in Fort Wayne, is said to have left an estate of some $460,000 to his widow and two children. This fact, however, should not tempt other aspirants for wealth to follow in Condon's pathway. This is doubtless the exception that proves the general rule that the life of the gambler ends in poverty. It is in most cases the friends who are called upon to provide burial expenses for the man who has spent his life in flirting with the fickle goddess of chance.

"I Turned Flashlight on Dark Corners; There Was a Gun and Nerve to Back Up What I Did," Says Mrs. Frisinger.

MRS. AGNES FRISINGER

Hoopeston, Ill., Aug. 28.—This town, in the center of the middle west corn belt, is no longer famous merely for its canned corn. Now it owes its greatest fame to a Mrs. Agnes Frisinger, the "woman policeman" who's making Hoopeston walk the chalk line.

"Tell the Sentinel readers how you 'cleaned up' Hoopeston?" I asked Mrs. Frisinger when I called on her in the Hoopeston town hall.

"I started to work just as a housekeeper would if she were cleaning her kitchen. I located the dirty spots—high and low and in the corners—and then I went after them not with a broom, but with a flashlight, and there was a gun and a billy back of that flashlight.

"I had full permission from the city council to go after the wrongdoers wherever I found them in queer places and I went after them in queer ways.

"One Sunday not long ago I crawled on my hands and knees for a quarter of a mile through the wheat fields to break up a crap game on the railroad right of way. Holding my revolver cocked in my hand I crept along until I got within arm's length of them. I watched them for fifteen minutes so that I could identify them later on if they got away from me. Finally I stepped out in the open, my finger on the trigger of my gun—there were ten men against one woman. I knew I couldn't make arrests, but I confiscated a dice box, a bottle of whisky—and this is a dry town and the carpet used as a gaming table.

"Two little girls were crossing the city park one night, a man tried to coax them to ride with him. I was watching from behind a clump of bushes. I stepped out, my gun leveled at the man and told him he was under arrest. He jumped in his buggy and got away. I pursued him for a couple of blocks, firing in the air to let him know I was coming. He hasn't been seen in Hoopeston since, and little girls in the parks are safer because I wasn't afraid to use a gun.

"The first night I walked a beat here I went to the park where I knew a gang of boys gathered. I ordered them to 'move on.' They didn't move, just laughed at me. They laughed first, but my gun laughed last. I shot into the ground, no one was hurt, but the gang was scared and it doesn't gather on that corner any more.

"I tell you of these three instances to illustrate the way I work in Hoopeston. I don't preach, that isn't a policewoman's business. I find out what the laws are and then I see that they are observed. It can be done, though some men police officers don't seem to think so.

"I've been warned that my life is in danger. There may be some truth in it. But they can't frighten me with threats. The girls and boys must be protected from evil influence. It's my business to give them protection even though the job isn't a very safe one."

Mrs. Frisinger was brought to Hoopeston last May when the "committee of fifty," composed of club women, decided that the youth of the town needed protection from an undesirable element attracted to the place each summer by the corn canning industry.

HOW INDIANA DOES IT.

The public-spirited men of Indianapolis have awakened to a realization of what the national guard means to a state. They are making plans to raise $500,000 with which to build a regimental armory for the Indiana national guard.

One of the means of raising money is to be a great military and war spectacle, to be held Monday, Sept. 6, at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The proceeds of this entertainment will go entirely to the armory fund. The spectacle will be called "War in Indiana," and will consist of a demonstration of military tactics as employed in the European war today. Fully 2,500 members of the national guard will take part in this spectacle.

Already the movement to build a regimental armory in Indianapolis, of which plan the military tournament is a part, has attracted nation-wide attention as "a citizens' movement to develop the national guard of the United States" and it is the expectation of the Indianapolis organizations which have the building project in hand, that other cities throughout the state, in which are located militia companies, will be encouraged to take up and carry forward similar projects in their communities, to the end that adequate armories may be provided, either by the state or otherwise, for every company of the Indiana national guard.

The Indianapolis commercial and civic bodies, recognizing the importance of encouraging the citizen soldiery, are working hard for the regimental armory. Resolutions adopted by these bodies express the belief "that it is the patriotic duty of every law-abiding citizen to see that the men of the Indiana national guard are surrounded with proper and beneficial influences, such as adequate armories and congenial environment, so that their moral, intellectual and physical attributes may be properly developed along with their acquirement of military training."

The commercial and civic bodies of Michgan could do no better than to exhibit some of the spirit of the Indianapolis people. The United States never will be a military nation, hence the necessity of having our national guard recruited to the limit and giving it every facility and the best of armories.

(Philadelphia, Pa., Telegraph.)

J. Barleycorn is a bad chauffeur. His hands shake, his knees wobble, his eyesight is poor and his conscience half asleep. And anyone who permits this reckless driver to sit at the wheel of a motor car is a menace to life. This is why little sympathy is felt for the Baltimore man just sentenced to two years in the penitentiary because, while intoxicated, he ran down and killed a woman. And if this convict fancies himself the victim of a great injustice, he should compare his fate with that of the woman whose neck his carelessness broke. One does not have to be intoxicated to deserve prison for reckless driving. Nor does one have to be rich, as the Baltimore man is, indeed, the plight of this man should have an equally sobering effect upon all careless drivers, tipplers, teetotalers, plutocratic and poor.

FARMER'S WORD OF WARNING.

Locust Grove, R. F. D. 2, St. Joe, Aug. 24.—To the Editor of The Sentinel:—Please say that auto drivers would better be more courteous to farmers and not recklessly run down and kill stock that chances to get out upon the highway. Mr. Chauffeur you have the same right to the public highway that farmers and others have but no more. Please slow up for teams and stock that gets out on the highway. Half of the road is yours, but the other half is ours. That chap who ran over three big hogs between Robison park and Cedarville last Sunday would better whack up. Our eye is upon you. A FARMER.

Indiana's system of taxation was bitterly assailed Friday evening at a meeting of the Fort Wayne Civic Forum in the auditorium of the South Wayne school.

Several discrepancies in the present tax system were pointed out by Attorney W. C. Clapham. Ross F. Lockridge, secretary of the Citizens' League of Indiana, declared he favored the abolition of the general property tax or a change in the constitution of the state. The speaker advocated the separation of local and state tax sources so that the state taxes would be evenly divided among the counties according to population. He would also divorce the taxation system from party politics by instituting a civil service scheme for assessors.

Calvin Brown, former county auditor, defended the tax ferret system. He declared that the state should be divided into four districts with a state tax commission of five or seven men to equalize the system of taxation in these districts. He advocated the appointment of a commission to serve throughout the year with a certain number as hold over members.

Attorney Glenn Smiley presided and made a short talk in which he pointed out two distinct evils in the tax system as follows: The naming of men for assessors who do not know property values and the uneven distribution of taxes.

TO PROVIDE SMOKING DEN FOR AGED WOMAN

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 28. A silent little group of gray haired women, most of them grandmothers, resting easily in comfortable rocking chairs with thin, blue ribbons of smoke rising from their meerschaums and calibash pipes, will be one of the modernisms at the new $150,000 women's building now in process of completion at the Ramsey county poor farm. For the old ladies are to have an elaborate smoking room, fitted in modern style, and, said Mrs. Albert Moore, wife of the farm superintendent today, "if the dear old souls want the walls covered with pictures of race horses, prize fighters and ball players, they may have them.

Vanceboro, Maine, Aug. 28.—The second large shipment this month of gold and securities from London to New York passed through here today on a special train. It was said here that it consisted of bonds to the value of $25,000,000 and $19,000,000 in gold.

The gold and securities are being forwarded to strengthen British credit in this country and to arrest the decline in value of the British sovereign. They were placed on a heavily guarded train at Halifax, where, it was understood, they had arrived on a British battleship guarded by a convoy of smaller craft.

The train was made up of six steel express cars, a dining car and a coach and carried thirty-eight express guards. The shipment was being forwarded by an express company in much the same manner as was the first consignment early in August when $52,000,000 in gold and securities were sent from London and deposited in the sub-treasury in New York to the account of J. P. Morgan and Co., the fiscal agents of the British government. After a very brief stop here to permit a change of engines the train left at 9 o'clock for Bangor on its way to New York.

Edwardsville, Ill., Aug. 28.—"I have read with great care the history of all the European countries for the last 100 years and I have read all the state documents issued in connection with the present war, but I confess that I don't know why this war is being fought," declared Vice President Marshall in an address here.

Speaking of immigrants, Mr. Marshall said: "I believe in inviting the foreigners of all nations to come to the United States, but when they do come here they must assimilate. STRETCH THE PIKE STRIEDER'S ORDER

"Stretch the pike" is the word that Secretary-Manager P. T. Strieder of the Fort Wayne Fair gave the grounds superintendent today on his return from a whirl round this week's Indiana and Ohio fair circuit. The emissary of Fort Wayne's crack fair, which is billed to open at the new fair grounds two weeks from next Tuesday, says that never in his life has he found the booking of concessions and pike shows so much a matter of picking and choosing as this year. There are scores of big pike attractions that are simply falling over themselves for bookings for the week September 14-18 and the mile of front originally set aside for the pike will not be sufficient to accommodate all the exhibitions for which contracts already have been signed. Wild animals, wild men and dancing girls, athletic shows, freaks, crystal mazes, etc., have been booked by the score for this year's elongated pike. The Claude Hamilton Wonder shows of course will be the center and prime attraction on the pike as this pretentious tented exhibition is a young carnival in itself.

An army may travel on its stomach, but a fair crowd travels on street cars, interurbans and railroad trains. The Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana will take care of the street car and interurban car end of this transportation feature. Special services will be installed on the Bluffton and the Huntington lines. Ever since the dates of the fair were posted along the company's lines, inquiries have been pouring into the transportation superintendent's office from agents along the line, as to the arrangements for carrying people to and from Fort Wayne. All the cars that can be spared will be pressed into operation. The city service of course will be almost instantaneous. The double track all the way will admit of the company's placing almost unlimited cars in service during the rush hours and there will be none of the irritating waits that detracted so materially from the pleasures of a day at the old fair grounds. The ground superintendent is making special provisions for parking autos and buggies.

If the club women of the country follow a suggestion made by Mrs. William Alexander, of New York city, for the coming winter, papers on numerous and various topics of art, philanthropy, literature and history may be put on the list of things to be done another day, while the club women put their fingers to work making kits for regular and volunteer soldiers of the United States army. Mrs. Alexander in her article notes with many other observers of conditions, a general one of unpreparedness for adequate national defense. Therefore her appeal to women to sew for the soldiers. Samples of kits will be sent out and it is not improbable that the spirit of patriotism will imbue more club women than those who compose the "Daughters of the American Revolution." Local club women who have been asked concerning their willingness to sew for this purpose even at the expense of the usual literary programs, are enthusiastic about the subject.

Exceptionally pretty girls have been selected as contestants in the popularity contest at Robison park on romp day, Wednesday, September 1. Every person attending will be privileged to vote for their favorite or the one they think is the most beautiful or popular. As is shown by the above pictures the task is not an easy one because they are all equally charming and lovely.

Manager C. H. Williams reports that greater interest is being taken in the contest than ever before. More inquiries have been made and when the final count is taken of the ballots cast it is almost certain that the result will be close.

Various Ages Represented.

All ages of girls attending romp day are represented in the ages of the contestants, ranging from five to fourteen years. Little Leona Klaren is the youngest. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Klaren, 523 LeSalle street. Mr. Klaren is an engine inspector at the Pennsylvania round house. Miss Bessie Joyce is just entering high school and will be a freshman this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Joyce, 1324 Hanna street. Mr. Joyce is in the grocery business.

Doris Welker is nine years old and is a pupil at the Jefferson school. She is the daughter of C. J. Welker, of an East Berry street dry goods store, and lives at 232 Brackenridge street. Gladys Underwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Underwood, 476 Elizabeth street. Miss Gladys is thirteen years old and is in the 7A grade at the Clay school. LaVerne Connell is seven years old and is the daughter of James Connell, deputy game warden. Little LaVerne's mother is dead and she lives with her grandmother at 1019 Taylor street. She is in the third grade at the Miner school. Katherine Raidy attends St. Patrick's school and is eleven years old. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Raidy. Mr. Raidy is a machinist in the Pennsylvania shops.

Friends Are Working.

The six charming girls are the very embodiment of all that is sweet and lovely in innocent girlhood, and all of them have a host of admiring friends who will work enthusiastically for them in the contest. Manager Williams explains that the popularity contest is for the purpose of providing entertainment and pleasure, not only for the girls themselves but for their friends. Each contestant will be awarded a keepsake for the occasion.

FLUFFY NEW FROCK FOR FIRST FALL DANCES.

BY BETTY BROWN.

For the dancing parties that begin in early September a charming frock is this one, made of white taffeta and "dead" beaded novelty. The lace forms a good effect at the back of the waist and falls gracefully into the tunic over the cream white taffeta skirt.

The waist line is just a bit above the regular line, and the bottom of the skirt is finished with the puff scallops that are to be so popular during the coming season. The black velvet bow with streamers dropping to the skirt bottom contrast against the white silk.

The record of but two deaths from cholera infantum or related summer maladies that attack babyhood and traceable to milk, have been written up to this time in Fort Wayne or the present season, and Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the health board hopes to hold the record at that figure. This is almost the local record for all time since health chronicles were officially kept in Fort Wayne. In 1912 there was but one death from summer complaint, at which time Fort Wayne ranked with Montclair, N. J., a much smaller city, which claimed the honors for protecting infantile life by guarding its milk supply. The splendid showing thus far made argues well for the vigilance with which the milk supply of this city is inspected, and the rigor with which the regulations are enforced. One of the two deaths was in a household where no use was made of ice, and the other was traced to the dairyman who supplies the family with the milk upon which the lost infant had been fed. Dr. Gilpin believes that no other city of the country approximating Fort Wayne in population, can come near this record.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO PARK BOARD.

Lavish praise is bestowed on the administration of the Fort Wayne park department, and especially upon the board of park commissioners by the state board of accounts in its report on the administration of the municipal park system and its administration during the period from January 1, 1910, to January 1, 1915, the term covered by the report. The report shows that Fort Wayne has invested in parks a total cash sum of $135,447.33, which includes the $13,200 paid for Swinney park during the more than twenty years it has been under city administration. Current valuations have been placed upon the realty embraced in Fort Wayne parks as follows by Field Examiners Haefling and Schrader, who made the examination: Old Fort park, $800; Lawton, $34,516; Reservoir, $24,000; Orff, $5,500; Swinney park addition, $8,200; Guildin playgrounds, $7,011.67; Lakeside, $7,800; Camp Allen, $1,284.-83; Weisser, $10,500; park strips, $1,284.83; Hayden, $4,500, and gravel pits, $16,850. The parks donated to the city are as follows: McCulloch, Williams, Swinney, Foster, Pontiac Place, J. H. Vesey, A. R. Hirons, Rockhill, a portion of Hayden and a number of park strips. The total park area is 262.57 acres and the present value of $662,500 or nearly five times the cost of the acquisition.

The encomiums given by the state board of accounts to the Fort Wayne citizens who have served upon the local park board are an exalting tribute to their efficiency, enthusiasm and unselfishness, and call attention to the fact that though they have been men very busy with their personal affairs they have given their time and efforts to the work for which they were appointed.

The report is concluded with these words:

"They have seen the possibilities in the way of beautifying the city and have looked forward to the time when their work should be well on the way and be appreciated. In fact, at times they have become over enthusiastic and have gone farther than their finances would permit, making necessary the borrowing of funds to tide them over until revenues were available, but they have given splendid service with no idea except for the good of the city and their work should be deeply appreciated by the citizens. An example of their interest in the parks of Fort Wayne is shown in the fact that one member donated a large tract of ground to the city for park purposes and another has purchased a tract of land adjoining one of the present parks with the intention of holding it until the city shall be able to purchase it for park purposes and at the same price paid by him, thereby saving the city the additional cost of the increase in value at a later date, and to prevent it being subdivided and placed on the market. The secretary of the board has kept his records in a very excellent shape and has the affairs of his office systematized to a high degree and has shown the closest attention to detail. He is much interested in the work and is giving excellent service.

COUNCIL PICNIC SUNDAY.

The City's Fathers Will Be Hosts at Cripple Club in Annual Feast.

The annual picnic of the city council of Fort Wayne, will be held all day Sunday at the Cripple club's grounds, on the St. Joe river, above Robison park. There will be no formal program, but there will be plenty doing and the usual abundance of things to eat. This year's picnic will be signalized by the absence of the kangaroo court, that made a great hit last year and hit everybody for a cash fine of a dollar or so with judicial impartiality. City Attorney Guy Colerick has taken the personal pledge of every member of the council that he shall be treated with the respect, courtesy and consideration that are due to the dignity of a newly married man. Not only the members of the council, but practically all the officials of the municipal government and their staffs will be present at the picnic. The picnickers will begin to start for the woods at 8 o'clock, meeting at the city hall and making the trip in automobiles.

MODEL CITY NOW PROPOSED.

Boston, Aug. 28.—Plans for a permanent model city to shelter a population of 100,000 to be erected at Plymouth in connection with the celebration in 1920 of the Pilgrims are being considered by municipal experts, it was announced today. The idea of those interested in the celebration is to eliminate the waste of money usual in the construction of temporary exposition buildings. They propose to build a permanent city one that will be fireproof and smokeproof and with zones for factories and industries.

Supt. and Mrs. Otto Schroll and daughter and son, Miss Laura and Alfred Schroll, will go to Chicago tomorrow and Monday morning leave for the Pacific coast, to be gone about three weeks. The family reside in Toledo and Mrs. Schroll, with her daughter and son, came to Fort Wayne this morning to remain until the hour for starting on the western trip.

A hat is no longer sufficient crown for lovely woman's head she wears also a scarf. A gaily colored piratical thing that might fitly adorn the head of a brigand. The new head scarf may be fantastic, but nevertheless it's one of the fashions that promises to be popular this fall. It's sometimes of crepe, and sometimes silk, but it's always in gay stripes, and it's swathed about the head so as to almost entirely cover the hair and make a great splash of color beneath a small turban.

Exceptionally pretty girls have been selected as contestants in the popularity contest at Robison park on romp day, Wednesday, September 1. Every person attending will be privileged to vote for their favorite or the one they think is the most beautiful or popular. As is shown by the above pictures the task is not an easy one because they are all equally charming and lovely.

Manager C. H. Williams reports that greater interest is being taken in the contest than ever before. More inquiries have been made and when the final count is taken of the ballots cast it is almost certain that the result will be close.

Various Ages Represented.

All ages of girls attending romp day are represented in the ages of the contestants, ranging from five to fourteen years. Little Leona Klaren is the youngest. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Klaren, 533 LeSalle street. Mr. Klaren is an engine inspector at the Pennsylvania round house. Miss Bessie Joyce is just entering high school and will be a freshman this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Joyce, 1324 Hanna street. Mr. Joyce is in the grocery business.

Doris Welker is nine years old and is a pupil at the Jefferson school. She is the daughter of C. J. Welker, of an East Berry street dry goods store, and lives at 232 Brackenridge street. Gladys Underwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Underwood, 476 Elizabeth street. Miss Gladys is thirteen years old and is in the 7A grade at the Clay school. LaVerne Connell is seven years old and is the daughter of James Connell, deputy game warden. Little LaVerne's mother is dead and she lives with her grandmother at 1019 Taylor street. Mr. Raidy is a machinist in the Pennsylvania shops.

Friends Are Working.

The six charming girls are the very embodiment of all that is sweet and lovely in innocent girlhood, and all of them have a host of admiring friends who will work enthusiastically for them in the contest. Manager Williams explains that the popularity contest is for the purpose of providing entertainment and pleasure, not only for the girls themselves but for their friends. Each contestant will be awarded a keepsake for the occasion.

FLUFFY NEW FROCK FOR FIRST FALL DANCES.

BY BETTY BROWN.

For the dancing parties that begin in early September a charming frock is this one, made of white taffeta and 'gray' beaded novelty. The lace forms a hood effect at the back of the waist and falls gracefully into the tunic over the cream white taffeta skirt.

The waist line is just a bit above the regular line, and the bottom of the skirt is finished with the puff scallops that are to be so popular during the coming season. The black velvet bow with streamers dropping to the skirt bottom contrast against the white silk. It will give a very good line and make a pretty

The record of but two deaths from cholera infantum or related summer maladies that attack babyhood and traceable to milk, have been written up to this time in Fort Wayne or the present season, and Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the health board hopes to hold the record at that figure. This is almost the local record for all time since health chronicles were officially kept in Fort Wayne. In 1912 there was but one death from summer complaint, at which time Fort Wayne ranked with Montclair, N. J., a much smaller city, which claimed the honors for protecting infantile life by guarding its milk supply. The splendid showing thus far made argues well for the vigilance with which the milk supply of this city is inspected, and the rigor with which the regulations are enforced. One of the two deaths was in a household where no use was made of ice, and the other was traced to the dairyman who supplies the family with the milk upon which the lost infant had been fed. Dr. Gilpin believes that no other city of the country approximating Fort Wayne in population, can come near this record.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO PARK BOARD.

Lavish praise is bestowed on the administration of the Fort Wayne park department, and especially upon the board of park commissioners by the state board of accounts in its report on the administration of the municipal park system and its administration during the period from January 1, 1910, to January 1, 1915, the term covered by the report. The report shows that Fort Wayne has invested in parks a total cash sum of $135,447.33, which includes the $13,200 paid for Swinney park during the more than twenty years it has been under city administration. Current valuations have been placed upon the realty embraced in Fort Wayne parks as follows by Field Examiners Haefling and Schrader, who made the examination: Old Fort park, $800; Lawton, $34,516; Reservoir, $24,000; Orff, $5,500; Swinney park addition, $8,200; Guildin playgrounds, $7,011.67; Lakeside, $7,800; Camp Allen, $1,284.83; Weisser, $10,500; park strips, $1,284.83; Hayden, $4,500, and gravel pits, $16,850. The parks donated to the city are as follows: McCulloch, Williams, Swinney, Foster, Pontiac Place, J. H. Vesey, A. R. Hirons, Rockhill, a portion of Hayden and a number of park strips. The total park area is 262.57 acres and the present value of $662,500 or nearly five times the cost of the acquisition.

The encomiums given by the state board of accounts to the Fort Wayne citizens who have served upon the local park board are an exalting tribute to their efficiency, enthusiasm and unselfishness, and call attention to the fact that though they have been men very busy with their personal affairs they have given their time and efforts to the work for which they were appointed.

The report is concluded with these words:

"They have seen the possibilities in the way of beautifying the city and have looked forward to the time when their work should be well on the way and be appreciated. In fact, at times they have become over enthusiastic and have gone farther than their finances would permit, making necessary the borrowing of funds to tide them over until revenues were available, but they have given splendid service with no idea except for the good of the city and their work should be deeply appreciated by the citizens. An example of their interest in the parks of Fort Wayne is shown in the fact that one member donated a large tract of ground to the city for park purposes and another has purchased a tract of land adjoining one of the present parks with the intention of holding it until the city shall be able to purchase it for park purposes and at the same price paid by him, thereby saving the city the additional cost of the increase in value at a later date, and to prevent it being subdivided and placed on the market. The secretary of the board has kept his records in a very excellent shape and has the affairs of his office systematized to a high degree and has shown the closest attention to detail. He is much interested in the work and is giving excellent service.

COUNCIL PICNIC SUNDAY.

The annual picnic of the city council of Fort Wayne, will be held all day Sunday at the Cripple club's grounds, on the St. Joe river, above Robison park. There will be no formal program, but there will be plenty doing and the usual abundance of things to eat. This year's picnic will be signalized by the absence of the kangaroo court, that made a great hit last year and hit everybody for a cash fine of a dollar or so with judicial impartiality. City Attorney Guy Culerick has taken the personal pledge of every member of the council that he shall be treated with the respect, courtesy and consideration that are due to the dignity of a newly married man. Not only the members of the council, but practically all the officials of the municipal government and their staffs will be present at the picnic. The picnickers will begin to start for the woods at 8 o'clock, meeting at the city hall and making the trip in automobiles.

A hat is no longer sufficient crown for lovely woman's head she wears also a scarf. A gaily colored piratical thing that might fitly adorn the head of a brigand. The new head scarf may be fantastic, but nevertheless it's one of the fashions that promises to be popular this fall. It's sometimes of crepe, and sometimes silk, but it's always in gay stripes, and it's swathed about the head so as to almost entirely cover the hair and make a great splash of color beneath a small turban.
